VOL. XVII. NO. 173. TOLEDO, OHIO, SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1892. LAST EDITION. TWO CENTS.

WEATHER.

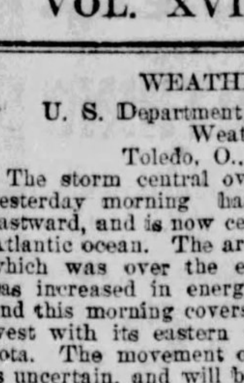
U. S. Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau,
Toledo, O., Nov. 12, 1892.

The storm central over Lake Superior yesterday morning has moved rapidly eastward, and is now central in the North Atlantic ocean. The area of low pressure which was over the extreme northwest has increased in energy and magnitude, and this morning covers the entire northwest with its eastern crest over Minnesota. The movement of this storm area is uncertain, and will be governed by the movements of the high areas which now cover the lake region and southern states. These two high areas will probably merge into one and move over the lake region, and if the high continues to move eastward it will be followed by the storm now in the west; if the high remains stationary over the lakes it will hold the storm in check, and the weather will continue fair.

The temperature has fallen over the upper lake region, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, and Wisconsin; in all other sections it has risen or remained stationary.

High southwest to northwest winds have been reported from stations on the lakes during the past 24 hours.

Local forecast for Toledo and vicinity—On Saturday, fair, slight change in temperature. On Sunday, fair, followed by light rain or snow.



Checked—the progress of Consumption. It's cured, too, if it's taken in time. What is needed is the one unfailing remedy for Scrofula in all its forms—for one of those forms (Lung-scrofula) is Consumption.

Purify your blood—that's the first thing. Rid it of the taints and poisons that make it easy for this dreaded disease to fasten its hold. Then if you haven't delayed too long, you can be cured.

From beginning to end, the remedy is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the most potent blood-cleanser, strength-restorer, and flesh-builder known to medical science. Consumption, and every form of Scrofula and blood-taint, all yield to it. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all severe, lingering Coughs, it's an unequaled remedy—and the only one for the Blood and Lungs that's guaranteed. If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

FOLDING BEDS

You Can Do Almost Anything

With our Goshen folding bed. There used to be an idea that two into one wouldn't go; this bed upsets the notion completely. It doesn't, like the chameleon, change its color, but it does change its character, and it is as handsome as a bed at night as it is as a book-case in the day-time. It is one of the happiest combinations of modern ingenuity, and in an instant it turns your sleeping apartment into a handsomely appointed library. Perhaps you have an idea that this double advantage carries with it a double cost. It does not. Call and see it and learn the price.

The Cabinet Has Fallen a Third Time,

And the Situation Is Growing Alarming.

Paul Newman on His Way to Washington.

United States War Ships Ordered to Keep Within Hailing Distance of the Islands.

New York, Nov. 12.—The Herald prints the following special from Washington:

Advices from San Francisco giving the latest news about the situation in the Hawaiian islands formed one of the topics of discussion at yesterday's cabinet meeting.

The turning down of the cabinet there for the third time, and the other particulars given in yesterday's dispatches have been confirmed officially by wire from San Francisco.

Ordinarily the deparments here do not get information from Honolulu until the mail arrives from San Francisco. That the wires have been resorted to this time is pretty good evidence of the gravity of the situation in Honolulu.

It is evident, too, the administration here so regarded it, for at the close of the cabinet meeting yesterday Secretary Tracy telegraphed to San Francisco to stop the orders which were to go by steamer to-day directing the alliance to leave Honolulu for Samoa.

Another message was sent to San Francisco to have the Ranger made ready to visit the Samoa group. She will go by way of Honlulu so that she may reinforce the Boston and Alliance if it should be necessary.

The announcement that Paul Newman, formerly attorney general of the queen's cabinet, is en route to Washington on a secret mission for the queen, is not a surprise to the state department.

The department not only knows he is coming, but also what he is coming for.

It was probably in anticipation of his visit that Hawaiian affairs were discussed at the cabinet meeting yesterday. It is well known to naval officers here who have a personal acquaintance with Mr. Newman, that he is strongly in favor of the United States assuming a protectorate over the Hawaiian islands, and there can be no doubt that the object of his mission here at the present time is to bring about such a result.

BENJAMIN HARRISON

Tells Why He Was Defeated Tuesday.

He Sets Down Hard on Mr. Carter.

There Was Too Much Rainbow Chasing by the National Committee.

New York, Nov. 12.—"President Harrison talked freely about the recent defeat of his party and the causes which brought it about," says a dispatch from Washington to the Herald.

"He discussed not only the recent election, but the gravity of the situation which now comforts the republican party. The overwhelming defeat of the republican party, the president said, was due mainly to the position of the party on the tariff question. The republicans had forced this issue to an extreme which evidently did not meet with the approval of the people.

"This expression of opinion on the part of President Harrison verifies the rumor current here some time ago that it was the party and not the president who took such an extreme position on the two leading issues on which the republican campaign was to be made.

"There was another important element, the president said, which had much to do with the defeat of the republican party last Tuesday, and its force was felt at the north as well as at the south. It was that there was a popular belief that the force bill issue kept the solid south within the old lines, but in the president's estimation it did more than that, for it brought to the support of the democratic ticket many votes in the north.

"The verdict of last Tuesday, the president continued, could be construed in but one way. It meant a condemnation of the extreme high tariff policy of the republicans. The inevitable result, if the party was to hope for a renewal of power, was a modification of this position, but not a renunciation altogether of the protective tariff policy, which had been the keynote of every republican campaign for many years past.

"The president did not dwell on this point of the discussion, possibly because it would have revived the Blaine reciprocity idea, regarded by many here as the saving clause of the McKinley law.

"President Harrison has very decided views as to the conduct of the campaign. He does not think very much of Chairman Carter, of the republican national committee. He consented to Mr. Carter's appointment only when it became evident that no more acceptable man could be secured. He said the campaign had been mismanaged and that much better results would have been secured but for the 'rainbow-chasing schemes' schemes to which Mr. Carter gave countenance and assistance. The president is particularly chagrined at the result in his native state and believes that it was largely due to lack of good generalship.

"What he wanted them to do, he said, and what he endeavored to impress upon them was the absolute necessity of keeping the republican states in line and carrying New York.

"The president said that he had realized for some time past that the drift of public sentiment was against him and his party, and it was this that led him to force this advice upon the party leaders. The disregard of this advice had much to do with the result of last Tuesday.

"The president realized before any of the election returns came in Tuesday that he was a defeated man. He hoped for success until the last hour, but admitted he had not expected it. One of the reasons for the president's doubt as to his election was the well known disaffection of a number of the prominent leaders of his party. This is evidenced by his statement with regard to Dudley, Quay and Cameron. As to Cameron, the president believes he not only failed to support the ticket, but actually did all in his power to defeat it.

"Cameron's influence extends, like Quay's, far beyond the confines of Pennsylvania, and the president evidently realizes that both these gentlemen were in a position to do much to injure the ticket in the heretofore doubtful states of New York and Indiana.

"As to Col. Dudley the president said he did not believe Col. Dudley had done anything to injure the ticket, but his influence had rather been of a negative character. Practically the president admitted that Col. Dudley's influence in Indiana had been used if not to knife the ticket, to keep his friends from working for it.

"In closing the interview the president said that while some mistakes might have been made, it was quite evident to any man that nothing could have withstood the popular uprising of the people against the high protective policy to which the republican party stood pledged by the McKinley law."

OFFICIAL COUNT

Will Be Necessary in Ohio

To Tell Who Has Been Elected.

The Face of the Returns As Gathered in Columbus Favor the Democrats.

Columbus, O., Nov 12.—(Special)—The official vote is not yet in.

The vote is so close that it will take the official count to tell which party has carried he state.

The situation is clearly explained by Chairman Farley as follows:

"The gentlemen engaged in receiving and tabulating returns at democratic headquarters arrive at the conclusion that the first named elector on the democratic and republican tickets respectively are elected, and that the remainder of the electors on the democratic ticket, with one exception, have a plurality of at least 500.

"The election of the first named elector on each ticket occurs by reason of voters marking their ballots at the left of the head of each ticket and not in the place designated by law for the marking of a straight ticket, and from the fact that these ballots were counted for only one elector.

"On the state ticket we are satisfied that Col. W. A. Taylor has a plurality of about 500. To arrive at the result stated we had the pluralities returned to election boards in 84 counties and estimates of chairmen of committees in four counties.

"We believe our computation and conclusions are correct, and that the democratic pluralities will exceed the figures named on a full fair official count.

"We especially request democratic members of election boards to be vigilant and watchful in making the count, and see that the democratic candidates receive credit for all the votes cast for them. We will be satisfied with whatever result a fair count may show, and we will not stand or abide by any result attained by unfair means."

W. A. Taylor, democratic candidate for secretary of state, wires as follows:

The net democratic gains in Ohio have been 22,150.

McKinley's majority in 1891 was 21,511.

These figures would show a democratic victory by 639 votes.

But in a great state like Ohio, where so many votes have been cast, it will certainly take the official vote to settle the question:

Col. Taylor says: "I reiterate the claim that I have been chosen secretary of state by the electors of Ohio, and I am not going to surrender the flag after storming the breastworks and capturing it unless the machinations of professional experts circumvent the will of the people."

M'KINLEY TO RESIGN

Such Is the Report From Columbus.

Believed That He Will Again Practice Law.

Ohio's Official Head Refuses to Discuss the Political Snow Storm.

Columbus, O., Nov. 12.—There was a rumor here yesterday that Gov. McKinley would resign before January 1 and move to Pittsburg to succeed to the law practice of Judge Shiras, recently appointed to the supreme court bench.

He has just returned from Pittsburg and that is the basis for the rumor, which has been authoritatively denied.

Private Secretary Boyle said the governor had made no statement for the press regarding the election result as he had expected to do, and he could not say when it would be made, if at all.

Republicans in Washington Are Flopping.

Harrison Blames Platt and Quay.

Poor Old Bill McKinley's Pill Is the Punching Bag for All of Them.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Harrison's bread and butter brigade have not yet discovered what struck them, and they are trying to find out. The most conspicuous of them are already preparing to vacate early next March. Those distinguished patriots and partners, Bussey and Raum, are very indignant, it is understood, at the American people, while that thrifty statesman and economist, Robert P. Porter, has come to the conclusion that the American people do not know when they are well off and cannot recognize a good thing when they see it.

They are all, or such of them as will express an opinion, trying to make a scapegoat of poor Mr. McKinley.

They are willing to admit for the first time, but in a quiet way, that perhaps tariff duties are too high.

None of them, of course, will pretend that they are themselves in any way to blame for the great republican collapse. Raum, Bussey, Porter, Partner Miller and the rainmakers of the agricultural department would perhaps be indignant if anybody suggested to them that they had much to do with piling up the indignation of the American people.

They will all regret the loss of their jobs, and all of them pretend to believe that the country is going to the demnition bowwows.

The underlings in the departments, who were very noisy in their declaration of republican partisanship and very conspicuous by their display of republican badges during the campaign, are now singing very low and gentle, and take occasion every once in awhile to drop a hint that Cleveland is a great statesman and a wise man, and that the country may perhaps be as prosperous and happy under a democratic as under a republican administration.

These are the fellows that will make a supreme effort to hold on to their places. The heads of departments and of bureaus of course, expect to g[illegible] promptly after Cleveland's inauguration, but the clerks, chiefs of divisions and men of that kind have an idea that they will hold on, and it is safe to say that they are preparing to make an immense flop.

Look out for innumerable conversions to the democratic creed among the employes of the government in departments in this city during the next few months. There are a good many prominent offices now vacant, and the expectation is that the president, perhaps, will have some difficulty in filling them with the proper kind of men.

Of course, if Harrison had been re-elected, he would have but to select his men, but no first-class man will care to take office ju[illegible] a few months. These offices are outside of the civil service regulations and are looked upon as the legitimate patronage of the party in power.

The office of first assistant postmaster general is now vacant because of the resignation of Colonel Whitefield. The land commissionership, lately held by Tom Carter, is also vacant. Perhaps Tom will return and fill it until the 4th of March, as he has not much else to do just now.

There are two vacant assistant secretaryships of the treasury by the resignation of Messrs. Crounse and Nettleton, and the diplomatic missions to Italy, Portugal and Switzerland are also at the disposal of the president.

There is some talk to the effect that the president does not intend to fill the diplomatic posts, but he will have to pick out some persons to take the assistant secretaryships. It is also pretty well understood that Partner Miller is about to retire from the cabinet, having made up his mind that his great ambition to go on the supreme bench cannot be satisfied.

The president himself is taking his defeat pretty hard. Outwardly he pretends to be philosophic, but he accuses Platt, Clarkson, Quay and Fassett and those who fought him at Minneapolis with treachery, and that he looks upon Blaine as the arch traitor of the party.

It is almost certain that if the republican party attempts to pull itself together for another presidential contest it will at any rate be divided into two factions implacable in their hatred of each other.

The statement also comes from a man very close to the president that Mr. Harrison did not want Whitelaw Reid on the ticket with him, but on the contrary preferred Wm. Walter Phelps or Mr. Morton as his running mate in 1892.

Those who were most warmly opposed to Harrison at Minneapolis were the men who nominated Reid, and Harrison believes that Reid's name on the ticket cost the party hundreds of thousands of votes throughout the country.

The probability that the democrats will control the next senate, and, as a natural consequence, reorganize that body, is causing the officers and employes of the senate much uneasiness just now. There are plenty of soft places within the gift of the majority of the senate, and of course if the democrats have control of that body the first thing they will do is to turn out the republicans and give their places to democrats. The house having gone overwhelmingly democratic, the employes at that end of the capitol are extremely cheerful and contented.

The president will have four vacancies on the bench to fill between now and the 4th of March. These are United States judgeships caused by the retirement of Judge Blodgett of the Chicago district, by the resignation of Judge Montgomery of the supreme court of the District of Colorado, by the retirement of Judge James of the same court on the 1st prox. and by the resignation of Judge Dixon of the Utah district. These are life positions, and are really the most alluring prizes remaining within the gift of the administration. The judiciary is the only branch of the government which will remain under the control of the republican party after the 4th of March next. United States judges are appointed for life, subject to the privileges of voluntary retirement on full pay after reaching the age of 70 years, provided they have been 10 years in service. The district and circuit judges are, as a rule, republicans, and it is unlikely that there will be a sufficient number of vacancies during the next four years to enable Mr. Cleveland by new appointments to give the democratic party a majority of these positions.

GLORY ENOUGH.

Read Cleveland's Electoral Vote.

Without the States of Ohio and California

He Will Have Two Hundred and Seventy-One Votes in the College.

New York, Nov. 12.—Cleveland's vote in the electoral college is, according to the latest returns, 271 without California and Ohio, which are claimed by both parties. If he gets these states the vote would stand Cleveland, 303; Harrison, 118; Weaver, 23. This is based upon the reports that Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Nevada and North Dakota are for Weaver, and that Michigan gives Harrison eight and Cleveland six votes. Nebraska and South Dakota are republican, and the republicans appear to have one of Ohio's 23 electors.

Cowdrick, the house mover, was fined $5 and costs for cutting the trees on Madison street. There were twenty or more witnesses and the costs will amount up to a goodly sum, which, with his attorney's fees, makes it a costly thing to spoil the city shade trees, but not as costly as it should be.

Weather Talk.

"A narrow escape," was the way the weather man expressed it when referring to Toledo's chances last night. He added: "The temperature at the Sault was down to 12 degrees and it snowed there during the night. It was snowing at Marquette this morning. Toledo's lowest temperature was 35, and highest 39. The slight range was on account of the evaporation of the snow. The precipitation here was .01, composed of rain, snow and sleet. It was a little heavier all around us, being .04 at Cleveland and Detroit, and .06 at Sandusky. The chances are for cloudy weather clearing, followed by rain, if not tomorrow night, then on Monday."

"Yours in Gloom."

The following pathetic ode was received in the city yesterday by a strong republican. It was also written by a republican, and shows how the mourners are trying to console each other:

"I must turn to you for condolence. I worry so about Ohio. Sleeping or waking I see Ohio. I look out of the window with feelings of the deepest dejection and see the snow flakes fall on the sacred soil of Ohio. I go back to bed, and in the silent darkness can only murmur Ohio. I awake in the morning, and, alas! I cannot see the June roses and the green meadows; no, I cannot. Oh, where, where is our beautiful Buckeye Ohio?

"Yours in gloom,
"AN OHIO MAN."

A Toledo Lady's Game.

Brown, Eager & Hull have placed on the local market a game that is catching the people. It is called musical keys and was invented by a Toledo lady, Miss Sara W. Featherstone, of Superior street. She almost stumbled on to the idea by accident while trying to amuse her pupils. It is published by a Boston house and has captured the musical Bostonians. While it is an interesting game, unconsciously it teaches the player much about music and musical terms. It promises to become very popular.

Injured by an Electric Car.

At 8 o'clock this morning a Robison Belt Line motor car struck John Lavan as he was crossing Summit street at Madison.

The man evidently did not see the car, and the motor man was running so fast that it was impossible to stop in time to avoid the accident.

The force of the collision knocked Lavan off his feet, and he fell under the front platform, but fortunately was only rolled along in front of the wheels. He was not cut in any manner, but to what extent he had been injured is not known, though it is thought not seriously. The Robisons called McGlynn's ambulance and sent Lavan to his home on Wakeman street.

Please allow me through your columns, to acknowledge the receipt of a handsome rocking chair, offered in a lottery by your society, in which my number 29 fortunately won. The members of the Frauen Verein are worthy of great praise for their unceasing efforts to do good among the deserving poor of this city. For 16 years these ladies, although few in number, have been working in an unpretentious way helping the sick and needy on all sides.

Such a society is entitled to the kind consideration of every charitably disposed person and it may rest assured, it has the best wishes of the citizens in general.

The Psalter and appropriate anthems will be sung in addition to the following program:

Processional—"Breast the Wave, Christian."

Magnificat—By E. Bunnett.

Nunc Dimittis—By E. Bunnett.

Sermon hymn—"Love Divine All Love Excelling."

Sermon—Rev. C. Scadding.

Vesper hymn—"Lord, Keep Us Safe This Night."

Retrocessional—"O Mother Dear Jerusalem."

The members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew will be in attendance, and will gladly show strangers to any seat and provide them with leaflet giving hymns and full order of service.

Ideal Council's Idea.

A novel scheme has been devised by Ideal council, National Union, whereby to receive new members. As an inducement to its members to solicit proper and eligible persons to become members five prizes to be known as first, second, third, fourth and fifth prizes will be given, one to each of the five members who shall obtain and secure the greatest number of new members, initiated between the first day of November, 1892, and the first day of June, 1893. Said prizes to be graded as follows: $50, $35, $20, $10, $5. The successful contestant who shall win either of the above prizes shall be allowed to suggest the nature of such prize. All prizes to be purchased by a committee which shall be appointed for that purpose, at the first meeting in June. No member shall be entitled to the first prize who shall not have secured 15 or more members; no member shall be entitled to the second prize, who shall not have secured 10 or more members; no member shall be entitled to third or fourth prize, who shall not have secured five or more members; no member shall be entitled to more than one prize. None of the above prizes shall be payable in money.

A LITTLE JOKE

On the Book at the Office of the Health Department.

Everyone has had his joke more or less. The railroad offices have been hung with tariffs on freight to the Salt river district, bake shops have displayed receipts for making a republican humble pie, and so on. The city health department has its joke as well as the rest.

It is the custom to write all reports of contagious diseases in a reference book.

To-day the following appears among reports of diphtheria, scarlet fever and the like:

A contagious disease has broken out in the government building. Mortality liable to be great—card on.

AN OPEN LETTER.

Two Well Known Physicians Address the Public.

Lax Medical Laws Enable Fakirs to Fleece People—A Direct Personal Statement of Interest to Everybody.

To Our Friends and the Public:

Since locating in this city, we have learned from our patients and from others with whom we have conversed, that the people of the city of Toledo have suffered terribly at the hands of quacks and impostors, medical frauds and tramps who have infested the city.

Under the lax medical laws of Ohio, almost any kind of quackery can be carried on, and so much of it has been done that it is not at all surprising that the people of this city should hesitate before entrusting their cases to doctors who advertise in the papers.

There is this to be remembered, however. It must not be considered that because a doctor advertises he is to be classed with quacks and frauds. There is a wide distinction between advertising doctors and doctors who advertise. Among the latter class are some of the best men in the country. Among the former are the frauds, fakes, humbugs and charlatans who operate under a respectable guise to deceive, rob and commit crime.

There is a class of men in every community who advertise themselves as specialists. They were not specialists before they advertised. We respectfully refer the public to our credentials which are printed below. Further than this we will not go, as we believe too much in the intelligence of the people to assume that puffing or self laudation will weigh more than careful, conscientious work.

We are here as gentlemen and physicians to practice medicine, to treat all diseases. Our rates are $5 a month for service and medicines. We have located in Toledo to remain. We want every man, woman and child in this community, who is suffering from any disease whatever, to know that they can save money by taking treatment with us. If anyone who is being treated for a chronic disease is paying more money than this, he is wasting the surplus over $5 a month.

Our record is an open book, our credentials can be inspected at our offices, and our ability is attested by the cures that we perform. We respectfully solicit the patronage of the people of Toledo.

W. C. BYERS, M. D.
WILLIAM DOUGAN, M. D.

For a month past, Drs. Byers and Dougan have been treating a large number of patients free of cost. This was done for the purpose of demonstrating to all who cared to test them what they could do. A great many doctors advertise, but very few of them carry out the letter of their promise. It is one thing to advertise and another to cure. Drs. Byers and Dougan do not guarantee a cure, but they promise to cure every case that is curable. Each physician has had a wide experience in the treatment of chronic diseases. Each is a competent, skilled, able man. They refer to testimonials given by grateful patients to show what they can do, and they are anxious to undertake to treat those who have failed to obtain relief from other physicians.

The free treatment period has expired. Henceforward the price for medical treatment at the hands of these physicians will be $5 a month for all diseases. Medicines are furnished free. Remember, therefore, that you can get the best medical service at the least cost from Drs. Byers and Dougan for any disease whatever, at Five Dollars a Month.

Their Credentials.

Drs. Byers & Dougan ask that their credentials and claims be thoroughly examined and investigated. Dr. Byers is a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pa., 1872, and has had 20 years active experience in diseases of the eye, ear, nose, throat and lungs. Dr. Dougan is a graduate of the Buffalo Medical College, and also of McGill University of Montreal, Canada, and holds both Canadian and United States qualifications. Dr. Dougan has had 25 years experience in treating chronic diseases of the lungs, stomach, heart, liver, kidneys, bladder, rectum, diseases of women, etc., etc.

The Great Actor Is Fifty-Nine Years Old.

New York, Nov. 12.—To-morrow will be the fifty-ninth birthday of Edwin Booth, and the invalid actor, who in all probability will never again face the footlights, will spend the day quietly surrounded by the members of his family at the Players' club. He has been spending the summer and autumn at Lakewood, N. J., but came to town a few days ago.

The once great actor is very feeble and requires constant attendance. He has made his New York home at the Players' club since the founding of that institution, but if his condition fails to improve he will probably take up his residence with his daughter, Mrs. Q. R. Grassman at the Randolph Flat on West Eighteenth street. He objects, however, to giving up his residence at the club until his condition, in his own judgment, becomes absolutely critical.

COMPLIMENTARY.

M. M. Eppstein Is Cornered and Caned.

The Bee Gets a Handsome Compliment.

The Democratic Executive Committee Holds a Meeting and Decides to Have a Rally.

We are going to have a rally, boys, and don't forget it.

It was a merited and handsome compliment the democratic executive committee paid Mr. M. M. Eppstein, vice-chairman of the democratic executive committee and chairman of the county central committee, yesterday afternoon.

There was a well attended meeting of the committee. Mr. M. M. Eppstein presided. Considerable business was transacted in the way of closing up the affairs and liquidating all of the debts of the committee. It was resolved that the executive committee should continue in service until after the contemplated ratification to be held very soon to celebrate the victory in a becoming manner. Committees were appointed to formulate plans and devise means to have a suitable celebration.

Hon. L. C. Cole, presidential elector of this district, was present, and he, on behalf of the democrats of Wood county, extended to the committee and to all democrats who desire to attend, an invitation to be present at their ratification meeting at Bowling Green next Monday evening. This was unanimously accepted and many will be present on the occasion.

M. M. Eppstein.

A resolution complimenting the Bee and printed elsewhere was adopted, and the secretary instructed to place a copy on file with the committee's papers.

After the regular routine of business Mr. Frank J. Cheney, on behalf of the committee, addressing Mr. Eppstein, said:

"This committee and the entire democracy of Lucas county and the district extend to you their congratulations for the victory won in this campaign. Had it not been for your zealous, efficient and able management of the affairs of this committee and your untiring efforts for the success of the entire ticket, and in particular for our standard bearer, the Hon. B. F. Ritchie, the result would have been different. We feel that we owe you much, and express to you our thanks and those of the entire democracy of the district and county, and also offer our undivided support to you to further any ambition you may have and to which you are so justly entitled. Let it be understood that we are ready to serve you to repay you in part for your noble, patriotic and unselfish devotion in this campaign. We feel that we can not repay you for what you have done and accomplished under such trying and up-hill circumstances. In order to show you in part our appreciation for all this (and we wish we could do more just now), I present you, in behalf of the committee, with this cane, which we ask you to accept from willing hands and true friends, and may you always remember this occasion and our true friendship. Extending to you our best wishes for your future we ask you, also, to accept these resolutions:

"Whereas, The victory achieved in this county in the election of Byron F. Ritchie was in a great part due to the energy, prudence and statesmanship of Mr. M. M. Eppstein, vice chairman of the democratic executive committee and chairman of the county central committee, be it

"Resolved, That we tender to Mr. Eppstein in behalf of the democrats of Lucas county, our most sincere thanks and warmest commendations, and we take pleasure in presenting this tribute to him to the democrats of Lucas county as a simple matter of justice, and trust that in the future his services so loyally and faithfully rendered will not be forgotten.

"In this connection we desire to express to the secretary, Mr. Chas. W. Murphy, and to the democrats of Lucas county, our earnest appreciation of the whole-hearted support given by him and them to this committee during the victorious campaign just closed.

"To the volunteer workers, and there were hundreds of them, we can only hope that their services will receive substantial recognition in the future."

It was some time before Mr. Eppstein could respond, being taken by surprise. He finally said: "These kind expressions from you, my friends, fill me with pride, and gratitude. Had it not been for your kind assistance my labors would not have availed much. You deserve the praises of our people in your noble and untiring work for the cause. To know and feel that I have your kind offices and friendship, and to be satisfied that we all have done our whole duty in this compaign is enough. The good result through which we will reap a rich reward for many years to come, is all I ask, and I feel satisfied to possess the same without any further recognition on your part.

"I thank you for your kind expressions and accept this token as a memento of the presidential campaign of 1892, in which the greatest victory for the people and by the people was won, in the history of our nation. Let us keep up this splendid organization so that we may still more spread the doctrine of true democracy for the cause of justice and right, for good government, retain in power and perpetuate for all time to come, such principles as will be indorsed by the whole people. I shall keep this elegant cane forever and hand it down from generation to generation so that my children's children may know what honest service for a good cause brings forth, and these resolutions will enter my household to ornament the front pages of my family record. I thank you again and wish you a grand and glorious future."

The cane, a handsome ebony one with a magnificent gold head, bore the following inscription:

"To M. M. Eppstein, Toledo, O., from the Lucas County Democratic County Central and Executive Committees.

"November, 1892."

Notes of Social Interest From Old Wyandot.

Upper Sandusky, O., Nov. 12.—About 20 of our young republicans entered into an agreement with an equal number of democrats for the giving of a grand election ball—the democrats to pay for same in event of Harrison's election, and the republicans in event of Cleveland's. The bill will fall to the latter and the ball will be given next Tuesday evening. It promises to be a notable affair.

For the Good of Others

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Endorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Sillsbee street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I see no reason why a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows whereof he speaks, should hesitate to approve an

Article of Merit

and worth, from which he or his family have been signally benefited, and whose commendation may serve to extend those benefits to others by increasing their confidence. My wife has for many years been a sufferer from severe

Nervous Headache

for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well but performed little. Last fall a friend gave her a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising what simply one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in number and were less violent in their intensity, while her general health has been improved. Her appetite has also been better. From our experience with

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits."

FROM NICARAGUA.

E. H. Wells Tells of the Progress Made.

The Work at Present at a Standstill.

Now Waiting for Uncle Sam to Endorse Its Big Issue of Bonds.

Greytown, Nicaragua, Sept. 25.—Construction work upon the Nicaragua ship canal has been practically suspended pending the meeting of congress next winter. It is hoped that both houses will then take up and pass the bill providing for a guarantee by the government of the canal company's securities.

Last year nearly 2,000 men were employed on the canal, but at the present time there are scarcely 250, including engineers, office assistants, etc. Only sufficient force has been retained to keep the wheels of the enterprise in sluggish motion and to make a show of progress.

Work at a Stand-Still.

Greytown is pretty nearly deserted by workingmen, and many of the residents have departed on account of the dull times. A recent census shows that only 450 people are remaining in the town, whereas it had a population of 1,200 18 months ago.

These facts, which at first appear discouraging to the prospects of the canal, are susceptible of explanation in a favorable light.

The Construction company has expended over $5,000,000 in advancing the work to its present stage, using for the purpose the private means of the men interested, and now, having demonstrated a sincerity of purpose to construct the canal, work has been temporarily suspended to give the American government a chance to assist the project.

It is well understood that the government can enormously reduce the cost of the enterprise by guaranteeing the maritime company's bonds. With such a guarantee capitalists would eagerly seize upon the securities at par and a saving of probably $100,000,000, which would otherwise go in discounts, would be effected. This great saving would be a benefit especially to commerce, as the canal tolls would be proportionately lighter from the fact that less interest would have to be paid on capital.

There is little doubt but that the canal company can float its bonds if disposed to sacrifice the same at 50 cents on the dollar, but this course is not justifiable as a last resort.

The Expenditures Well Managed.

Since reaching Greytown I have been carefully investigating the condition of affairs, and must say that so far the operations of the company evince excellent and economical management. Every dollar used has been made to count, and there are no evidences of any wasteful extravagance such as has disgraced and discredited the Panama canal managers.

The plant of the Nicaragua canal people, largely purchased from Panama at a discount, is kept in excellent order, and nothing is allowed to deteriorate. Although only two of the six dredges are now in use, the others are carefully looked after by the engineers.

The buildings constructed for the use of officers and employes are commodious and solidly built, corrugated iron being used for roofing and siding so as to avoid the deteriorating effects of the climate.

Any one who comes to Greytown can see the evidences of thee xpenditure of money in a wise manner.

These facts should receive due consideration by the public in its attempts to determine whether or not President Warner Miller of the Construction company is a good manager of business matters as well as a practical politician.

There is no doubt whateve rbut that considerable uncertainty exists in financial circles concerning the ability of Mr. Miller to properly manage the vast job which he has undertaken, and any bits of information which may cast light on the subject are of value.

An Engineer Who Makes Haste Slowly.

While speaking of this matter it may be well also to call attention to the fact that in some quarters the capabilities of Chief Engineer Monocal have also been called into question. It is said that he has no record of great engineering achievements. This fact is unfortunate, but so far as the work on the Nicaragua canal has progressed he has been found equal to every emergency, including the difficult matter of restoring the ocean harbor at Greytown.

Other engineers employed upon the works appear satisfied with Mr. Monocal, and with reason. Information which I have gathered goes to show that he has given the canal problem more study and practical research than any other man living and has left no labor undone to arrive at reliable conclusions respecting the difficulties to be faced along the canal route. He is thoroughly familiar with every foot of line and has certainly mastered an immense quality of details, all necessarily bearing upon the projected work. His plans for building locks and dams have been carefully scrutinized by other engineers and critics, and no valid objection to them has yet been raised.

Hostiles with Influence.

In forcasting the probable action of congress upon the pending bill to guarantee the canal securities the hostile influences exerted by the Pacific Mail and the Huntington roalroads must be given consideration. There is no doubt whatever but that both of these potent factors will use all their influence to harrass and delay the completion of the canal.

The reasons are evident. The Pacific Mail at the present time has a monopoly of the coast-wise trade, from San Francisco to Panama and New York. It has practically a contract with the owners of the Panama railroad to exclude the freight of outside boats coming from competitive points, so that freight, for instance, from San Francisco for New York can only be profitably shipped by Pacific Mail, unless the consignor is willing to intrust it to a sailing vessel going around the Horn.

When the canal is built this monopoly will be ended, as the number of coasting vessels and of through steamers will be largely increased and all will compete for the traffic offered.

Ships Will Rival Railways.

The Huntington corporation will also suffer severely from the construction of the canal, especially if it be built cheaply by government aid. With low canal tolls many new clipper ships will enter the competition for carrying trans-continental freight, and the Southern and Central Pacific roads will suffer a diminution of revenues. If the railroad people can, however, prevent the building of the canal by government aid it is their expectation that an enormously increased cost of construction will result from the sacrifice of the bonds, and tolls may in consequence be so high on the canal as to discourage many of the smaller ship owners from attempting to enter the competitive trade.

The time has arrived when the American people must arouse themselves to take an active iynterest in the isthmian canal projects, as do the nations of England and France. Home manufacturies have reached the point of over-production for the home demand, and foreign markets must be sought in South America and beyond the Pacific. These considerations shaped th epolcy of Mr. Blaine, and were also the controlling reasons which led Senators Sherman, Edmunds, Evarts and others, members of the foreign relations committee to so strenuously advocate in the Fifty-first congress the bill for aiding the construction of the canal by governmental guarantee.

In the letters on this subject which I shall forward from Nicaragua it is my desire not only to give a complete idea of the canal route to the half million of readers of the Scripps papers, most of whom, perhaps, have not heretofore interested themselves in the matter, but to present an array of facts which may help to convince many of the people of the middle states that their own prosperity, as well as that of the people living on the seaboard cities, will be enhanced by the early building of the canal under government patronage, and by the consequent development of American shipping interests.

CLASS OF '93

Have a Feast of Reason and Other Good Things

At the Manual Training School Last Night—Burning Addresses and Impromptu Speeches.

The High school class of '93 had a merry time in the rooms of the Manual Training school last evening.

First a banquet was given in the cooking school, at which the delicious cake and cream was made to disappear like mist before the morning sun, and the "feast of reason" then opened with a speech from the president of the class, Mr. Carl Keller, who invited Mr. Otto Thomas to make a speech upon "Our Class."

Mr. Thomas responded, and at the close of his very neat address, which convinced everybody that the class of '93 was the very best, Miss Mabel Raitz declared that Our School is the best in the Land.

Miss Grace Jennings came next, and proved most conclusively the absurdity of supposing there is any such thing as a mind.

High compliments were paid to "The Girls" by Mr. Louis Bartlett, and to "Our Teachers," by Mr. John Pratt, to the latter of which Miss Mary Whitaker was requested to respond, which she did in a happy manner.

A speech was also demanded of Miss Mary Dunlap, that lady complying with a complimentary address on the splendid entertainment of the class of '93.

Mr. Joseph Fisk was next called on, and he said he had no speech, but made a good one nevertheless.

The professors came next, eloquent, profound and witty talks being given by Professors Richards, Vandegrift and Howe. Miss E. Whittaker was profuse and graceful in her compliments to "Mine Host, the boys of '93."

Short talks were given by Messrs. Rudd, Ransom, Batch, Candee, Campbell, Eurich, and Prof. Adams.

A piano duet was rendered by Miss Marie Chapin and Mr. Harry Cummings.

The occasion was thoroughly enjoyed, and much credit is due the members of the class for the delightful entertainment.

WEDDED IN BUFFALO.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Arthur C. Blakesley, of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Maria S. Hayes, of Clyde, Ohio, appeared before his honor, the mayor, this morning and asked to be made man and wife. The mayor's marriage ceremonies are of a quality that wear and his fame had evidently reached the Hoosier state. The knot was tied and paid for and Mr. and Mrs. Blakesley departed for their home.

It is well to get clear of a cold the first week, but it is much better and safer to rid yourself of it the first forty-eight hours—the proper remedy for the purpose being Dr. D. Jayne's Expectorant.

HOTEL VICTORY.

Meeting of Creditors in This City Yesterday.

President Tillotson Makes a Report and Recommendations That Are Adopted.

At a meeting of the creditors of the Put-in-Bay Hotel company held yesterday afternoon at the office of President Tillotson in the Marine Building the following report and recommendations were adopted.

"The property of the Put-in-Bay Hotel company is in the hands of a receiver. If matters are permitted to take their course through the courts the property will be sold at receiver's sale. The object in calling this meeting of creditors is to lay before them a plain statement of the financial condition of the company, and if possible, arrange a plan of action which will insure payment to unsecured creditors.

"Assets—Hotel Victory, as it now stands, that is the building proper, cost about $400,000; the furniture, $100,000; the land, about 25 acres, was practically donated, but computed at the price at which we have sold $200,000 worth of lots surrounding it, is worth $75,000. We have lots which valued at the regular selling price aggregate $65,000, making the total assets, $640,000.

Note.—The lots noted above are deeded as security to Post & St. John in addition to the mortgage mentioned hereafter.

"Liabilities.—The debts secured and unsecured are as follows: A mortgage given to secure bonds issued May 1, 1891, as collateral security for moneys borrowed, $75,000; third, a mortgage given to Post & St. John, of Sandusky, Ohio, in addition to deed of lots mentioned above, for cash advanced and endorsements, $50,000; floating or unsecured debt about $65,000.

"This makes a mortgage indebtedness of $200,000 and a total indebtedness against the company's real estate of $265,000. We owe about $50,000 on the furniture secured by collateral mortgage on the same.

"Receiver's Sale.—Unless the company and creditors arrange a mutually protective plan of some nature, the property will be knocked down to the highest bidder at receiver's sale. What would be the result to unsecured creditors? The property is a summer hotel. Although advantageously located and promising a bright future it is really a speculative investment. It is not a question with any business man whether the property would sell at auction for enough to cover the first two mortgages.

"The Company's Plans.—We have arranged to issue $150,000 of mortgage bonds. The proceeds of these bonds will pay the two $75,000 mortgages. In addition to the mortgage held by Post & St. John, they hold deeds for lots valued at about $65,000. By selling these lots we can pay the Post and St. John claims. We have further arranged to increase our capital stock from $250,000 to $500,000 and allow to purchasers of $100 shares a stockholder's rate at Hotel Victory, viz: each share of stock will entitle one person to a discount of $1 per day from the regular rates at the hotel, provided, however, that the rates shall apply only to the regular members of the family of the person holding the stock. Thus, a man with a family of five, by purchasing five shares of stock will save $5 every day his family remains at the hotel. We have already offered this stock and it has been demonstrated beyond the possibility of doubt that the moment the affairs of the company are settled the stock will sell readily, and we can sell enough of it before the opening of next season's business to pay off our debts in full.

"The First Step—Before we can make any headway in placing bonds, selling stock and lots, the property must be taken

Out of the Hands of the Receiver.

The co-operation of the creditors will enable the company to do this and at the same time positively secure their claims.

"Our Proposition"—To enable us to take the property out of the receiver's hands we propose to give to each unsecured creditor a note at 12 months, with interest at six per cent., for the full amount of his claim, signed by J. K. Tillotson and indorsed by the Put-in-Bay Hotel company, and to secure said note by attaching thereto stock to double the amount of the note; and it shall be stipulated that said creditor shall be authorized at any time within the said 12 months to sell said stock, or any part of it, at its par value, retaining the amount of his claim, and on delivery of stock to purchaser, properly transferred, shall pay to said Put-in-Bay Hotel company the remainder.

The Result.—If the creditors will cooperate with the company to this extent we can at once take the property out of the receiver's hands, place the bonds, sell stock and lots, pay off the present mortgage indebtedness, and before the 12 months expire take up every note, thus paying 100 cents on every dollar of indebtedness. It remains for the creditors to determine whether a sale of the property offers to them as advantageous a settlement as the plan we herewith propose."

CHARGED WITH FRAUD.

Montreal, Nov. 12.—T. J. Chisholm, a well known commission merchant, was arrested last night on a charge of secreting goods with intent to defraud his creditors.

The amount involved is between $50,000 and $60,000, the Merchants' bank of Montreal, being heavily interested. Chisholm's store was burned out last winter, but the insurance companies refused to pay the claims on the ground of fraud.

Their gentle action and good effect on the system really make them a perfect little pill. They please those who use them. Carter's Little Liver Pills may well be termed "Perfection."

A GREAT DETECTIVE.

A Man Whose Name Is Known All Over the World.

An Important Matter That Ought To Be Known and Understood.

What He Has To Say About It in His Usual Enthusiastic Way.

A man well known all over the world and whose name is a terror to criminals and evil doers everywhere, is Robert Bruce, head and general superintendent of the great Bruce's American Detective Agency, which has its headquarters at 128 LaSalle street, Chicago.

Mr. Bruce is a great worker; nothing escapes his keen and active mind, and like most men who are enterprising and tireless in their business, he has overworked his brain, and kept his nerves upon such a strain and tension, that nervous difficulties resulted. In fact he felt that relaxed, weakened and enervated condition of mind and body which results in insomnia—that sleepless, restless, wakeful and disturbed condition which, unless arrested so surely results in dire disaster to mind, brain and body.

In chatting with the great detective, your reporter saw at a glance that it was with no invalid with whom he was talking. His bright eyes, fresh complexion and energetic manner showed at once that he was again in the best of health. Naturally the change in his condition became the subject of conversation.

"I suffered from insomnia for eight years," he said, "but three bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy completely restored me. This remedy is worth its weight in gold. I would not be without it if it cost ten times as much. "I have recommended it to some of my friends and they are also delighted with the results obtained from its use. May Dr. Greene live long and continue to manufacture Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy for suffering mankind."

We do not wonder at Mr. Bruce's enthusiasm. Lack of sleep kills. It racks brain and nerves. It unhinges and unstrings our nervous energies. It transforms a strong person into a weak one. If we can eat and sleep well, we can maintain good health.

The writer well knows the wonderful power of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy to produce the most restful, invigorating and refreshing sleep, besides making our nerves strong and steady as steel. It does not act like an opiate, but rather by its strengthening and invigorating effects upon brain and nerves. It is perfectly harmless also, being made from pure health-giving vegetable medicines. It is safe to give to infants and children of any age. All druggists keep it for $1.00, and it is indeed a God-send to sufferers from weak nerves and insomnia.

It is not one of the so-called patent medicines, but the discovery and prescription of Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th street, New York, a physician who has made his name famous as the most successful specialist in the treatment of nervous and chronic diseases, who can be consulted free of charge, either by calling upon him or by writing him.

CITY GAS.

Pumping to Begin by the 27th Inst.

Manager Heston, of the city gas line, was asked this morning when the pumping of gas would beging. He answered that there was nothing definite to be said further than that the contract is to be completed on November 27; but there was an expectation that one of the pumps would be in operation before that time. They were crowding along as fast as they could; but the only thing the board could do was to hold them to their contract, and try to have them fulfill it. A pump might be in operation in a week, or not till the time was up.

BAD ECZEMA ON BABY

Head One Solid Sore. Itching Awful. Had to Tie His Hands to Cradle. Cured by Cuticura.

Our little boy broke out on his head with a bad form of eczema, when he was four months old. We tried three doctors, but they did not help him. We then used your three CUTICURA REMEDIES, and after using them eleven weeks exactly according to directions, he began to steadily improve, and after the use of them for seven months his head was entirely well. When we began using it his head was a solid sore from the crown to his eyebrows. It was also all over his ears, most of his face, and small places on different parts of his body. There were sixteen weeks that we had to keep his hands tied to the cradle and hold them when he was taken up; and had to keep mittens tied on his hands to keep his finger nails out of the sores, as he would scratch if he could in any way gets his hands loose. We know your CUTICURA REMEDIES cured him. We feel safe in recommending them to others.

HERMAN BAUMBACH DEAD.

Friends Extend His Wife Condolence of Sympathy.

This morning Mrs. Herman Baumbach, a stanch and loyal democrat, received the following sympathetic letter from her brother. It is in deep mourning as was also the envelope:

Chicago, Nov. 9, 1892.

My Dear Tina: Words are at the best but a very poor and slight expression of the deep and heartfelt sympathy we desire to extend to those bereaved of what they hold best and dearest. Such sympathy, my dear Tina, is yours in the sad loss you sustained in the death of poor Herman. It is not fitting to speak in slighting terms of those who have passed away, but I cannot refrain from saying that the poor departed Herman was, and possibly, in his deceased state, is, a chump.

I should be glad to know when the funeral procession starts for Salt Creek, as I wish to send a wreath of leek to place on the boards that will inclose all that is left of one who without doubt had some redeeming qualities. With love from all, and deepest commiseration for such a good democrat as I know you to be, I am yours, HOWARD.

WAX FIGURE

Show Given by the Junior Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. hall, corner Summit and Orange streets, was well filled last evening with the friends of the Y. M. C. A. Juniors to witness a splendid performance given under the direction of Mr. James Martin.

The performance was in the nature of a wax figure show, and the following characters were faithfully presented: George Washington, Leonard Barnes, Charles Gitteau, Wesley Wuerfel. Mr. Cleveland, a good-sized rooster, nailed to a board. A Prima Donna was represented by Miss Minnie Smith, who warbled "When the Leaves Begin to Fall," with a coffee-grinder accompaniment.

F. E. Warren appeared as Robinson Crusoe, and Otto Weis as Julius Caesar.

Lottie Rake raked the hay a la Maude Muller; Oliver Twist was present in the person of William Kurtz, and a life-size representation of Big Eliza was given by James Johnson.

The statue of Tom Thumb was well taken by Master Arthur Siebert; Black Hawk, by Perry de Forest, and Tip-o-Tip by Geo. Wuerfel.

Miss Ella Taylor made a very pretty statue of The Girl I Left Behind Me, and Arthur Mitchke, as One of the Finest, was a pronounced success.

The performance provoked much merriment and was hugely enjoyed.

WHAT IS A COLD?

The Answer Given in a Lecture by Dr. Hartman at the Surgical Hotel, Columbus, Ohio.

A cold is the starting point of more than half of the fatal illnesses from November to May. A cold is the first chapter in the history of every case of consumption. A cold is the first stage of chronic catarrh, the most loathsome and stubborn of diseases. A cold is the legitimate parent of a large family of diseases, such as bronchitis, pleurisy, pneumonia, and quinsy. To neglect a cold is almost suicide. To fail to provide against this well-nigh inevitable evil is dangerous negligence. Pe-ru-na is a safeguard as a preventive, a specific as a cure for all cases of catarrh, acute and chronic, coughs, colds, consumption, etc., etc. Every family should be provided with a copy of The Family Physician No. 2, a complete guide to prevent and cure winter diseases. Sent free by The Pe-ru-na Drug Manufacturing company, Columbus, Ohio.

AN OLD SHOE

Passed From Boston Through the Mail Routes.

Full Many a Clerk Has Had His Joke on the Veteran, and on She Goes South.

There came in the mail to Toledo postoffice this morning an old shoe, which had been started on the rounds from Boston last July, and which has since been "away out in the west," and is returning eastward. The original tag is dated Boston, July 6, 5 a. m., and on it is written, "This shoe will not fit any one in this office. Return to sender." To this someone has added in a different hand, "Entirely too small," though the shoe is full 11 inches long, and was made on a wide last. The clerks of railway and other postoffices have attached cards to the parcel bearing remarks and sentiments, some of them postical and all more or less humorous. Several newspapers were also attached. The relic was brought into Toledo by Charles Holland of the Toledo & St. Louis railway postoffice, and he wrote: "'Ne sutor ultra crepidam.' Has been north, east and west; now send her south."

George W. Lathrop attached a card with the following effusion:

TRIBUTE TO A PASSING SOUL.

Pass on poor sole; we think it best;
In the "Future Great" you find no rest;
Toward Porkopolis you must go
They may use you well—I don't know.
—GEORGE W. LATHROP.

W. Warner, a special messenger in the Toledo office wrote this:

In a town of beans and old brown bread,
I suppose is the place your mate lies dead;
We pass you on from the Future Great.
The office is closed where they collect on freight.
—W. WARNER, Special Messenger.

Julius Sternberg, a clerk in the city department, broke out with, "Sail on, sail on, Oh, Ship of State!" Jas. B. Christy affixed the stamp "Received in Bad Order;" and another wrote "This boot (boat) was built for beauty and not for speed."

On one card had been written: "Don't stop here; she's going home to vote." A wicked Toledo democrat wrote across the card: "Reached Toledo just after election. Regarded as a counterpart of the G. O. P.—all broke up."

Assistant Postmaster Corlett said of such parcels: "It is a little joke, but we have no right to let them go." But go she does—to Cincinnati, and then, doubtless, "Away down south in Dixie."

FRANK PHILLIPS,

A Pike County Desperado Meets His Fate.

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 12.—The notorious desperado, Frank Phillips, of Pike county, Ky., on whose head a price was set, who was mixed up in the Hatfield-McCoy vendetta, and who killed a score of men, is reported to be dead.

Phillips quarreled Thursday with G. G. Peters, of Louisa, Ky., in Logan county, near the Pike county line.

Each had his followers, all well armed with revolvers and Winchesters. There has been ill-feeling between Phillips and Peters for some time.

The cause of Thursday's trouble is unknown. Four or five hundred shots are said to have been fired and when the smoke cleared away Phillips was found shot through the thigh and the left lung. It is believed that he died Thursday night.

Defiance celebrates this evening, while Bowling Green will jollify on Monday night.

"McKinleyism in Ohio is dead" is the way the Chicago Herald looks at the situation.

Gov. Campbell put it right, when in reply to an interviewer, he said: "Keep your eye on Ohio."

The alleged tin-plate factory at Elwood, Ind., has closed down for repairs. Too much campaign fake.

Four days after Grover Cleveland is elected and wheat advances four cents. Avant, calamity howlers!

The Bee invites the people of Toledo to make use of its want columns. It will prove a paying investment.

We now know exactly where we are at. —Blade.
And so do we—in the soup.

Chairman Dick lost his own county of Summit to the democrats for the first time in the history of the county.

Harrison places the blame on Platt and Quay, and they place the blame on McKinley, and McKinley says never a word.

The Cleveland net gain in Pennsylvania is 15,256, which is considerable, considering the ruling power of the great commonwealth.

The Ohio boy comes to the front again. Judge Altgeld, just elected governor of Illinois, was born near Mansfield in Richland county.

Steve Elkins and his tactics were roughly handled in West Virginia. The state's democracy is up at the front for honesty and integrity.

The republican bear came out of its hole, observed its own shadow, and crawled back for a four years' nap. May the fates rest its tired old bones.

He who fights and runs away
Lives to fight another day;
But he who fights and gets snowed under,
Is deader than three smelts, by thunder.

The republican campaign committee has a large supply of wild-cat bank note circulars on hand, which any peddler may have by applying to Jim Southard or Bob Adams.

Where was there ever a parallel case? A father and son sent to congress from the same town, and by different parties, and the son winning against betting odds of ten to one.

Mr. M. M. Eppstein steps around today handling the cane presented to him by the county committees as if it was worth its weight in gold. Max appreciates the gift.

Gov. McKinley has issued his Thanksgiving day proclamation, and we'll just observe it with grateful hearts for blessings temporal received in the past few days especially.

One of the problems requiring solution is how Senator Sherman can fulfill all the promises he made during his senatorial campaign last winter. The offices are without his grasp.

Our own Statesman Flickinger addressed political gatherings in New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and then with the perversity of a mule the states kicked the other way.

High tariff and rainbow chasing by the campaign managers did it, is the opinion of President Harrison. This is treason. Was not the extremely high tariff for the benefit of the poor workingman?

The fat government jobs promised to self-constituted labor leaders of Toledo, who were carrying in their pockets the votes of the workingmen of the district, will not materialize, since Ashley and his party were turned down.

Republican organs are now hedging behind Jim Blaine, and crying "I told you so." If James G. Blaine had been nominated for president, Maine and Pennsylvania would have gone democratic, with the rest.

Chicago having done so well by the democracy, it would be fitting for the Windy City to get up a national celebration over the victory, thus giving opportunity to witness the preparations in progress for the world's fair.

This is a point made by Foraker newspapers: McKinley's county and district went democratic, while Foraker's home was carried by his party, and also elected two congressmen. The harmony still continues almost oppressive.

Poor Thomas Carter, the republican national committee chairman, is receiving the scotching now. All sorts of things are put out against him, including the charge that he leaves an indebtedness of several hundred thousand dollars to settle.

There seems to be a slight difference between the opinions of President Harrison and the Commercial on what brought about Tuesday's defeat. Mr. Harrison is the most interested party, however, and if he is satisfied, the rest of mankind ought to be.

Mr. Ritchie and his friends visited Ottawa and Fulton counties, to witness the count of votes, as they had a perfect right to do. Simply this and nothing more. Republican talk about attempted skulduggery is the veriest bosh, and is entirely gratuitous.

Rooms are already being engaged at Washington hotels by democrats who will attend President Cleveland's inauguration. The occasion will be one long to be remembered, and as usual the Bee will be represented to give its readers the fullest details of the event.

Republican papers are arranging President Cleveland's cabinet. The editors have been fixing up cabinets for so long a time that they have apparently forgotten the fact that their slates do not go this time. The truth is their occupation in this respect is forever gone.

New York, California, Kansas and Wisconsin lose republican United States senators by the landslide of Tuesday, among them being Frank Hiscock, one of the Empire state's big four. Ohio democrats now regret the legislature was not chosen this fall instead of last.

Renewed confidence in the business tact and sound judgment of Grover Cleveland is given as a reason for the sudden and wonderful advance in the price of grain. The farmer can bank on Grover Cleveland and his principles and policy. The advance in the price of stocks and cereals gives the lie to the calamity howlers who predicted eternal ruin under the new regime.

Congressman M. D. Harter is suggested as the democratic candidate for governor next year. There is no doubt as to Mr. Harter's availability, but could the democrats elect another as his successor in the Fourteenth district? Now, there is a democrat at Lima in the person of Walter B. Ritchie, who is not embarrassed with a congressional seat. What's the matter with Ritchie for governor; it is a lucky name, too.

The organ on the corner insults the great mass of foreigners in the city in an effort to explain away the awful defeat of Tuesday. It says:

The democratic gain in the city is largely because of the newly-naturalized foreign vote. The foreigners who come here largely gather in the cities. They gravitate into the democratic party for a number of reasons—largely because they have not an intelligent idea of the real differences between the two great parties, and believe the democratic cry that protection helps the rich and injures the poor.

Many of Toledo's best citizens were foreign born and will certainly remember this uncalled for statement that they are not intelligent enough to know how to vote.

A WORD AS TO THE BEE.

The compliment paid the Bee by the democratic executive and county central committees at the meeting yesterday afternoon is appreciated. To the individual it is ever gratifying to feel that honest efforts are appreciated. To a newspaper the simple performance of a duty, honestly and earnestly performed, is in itself sufficient remuneration, but when added to this is the acknowledged praise of a party and a people, the reward is indeed gratifying.

The Bee simply did its duty in the campaign just closed, and it proposes, in weal and in woe, to follow the flag of democracy and tariff reform, and to work loyally and fearlessly for the best interests of the people as a whole, and the democratic party in particular.

The resolutions adopted by the committees appear elsewhere.

BEFORE ELECTION AND AFTER.

It is as amusing as it is instructive to review the lugubrious and pessimistic prophecies of the republican press before the late election if the result should by any possibility place the democratic party in power. Perhaps we may as justly say that all such statements were as insincere as they were absurd. It may also be added that never in the history of our politics were the people less touched by all this misrepresentation and more inclined to turn a deaf ear to all republican promises. The people of this country have simply tired of making the rich richer and the poor poorer, and a most marvelous revolution is the result.

Before election, the farming products were to reach a still lower depth of values in case of democratic success. This was one of the republican shibboleths. What is the result? In two days, when it became evident that the republican party had been swept from power, prices of grain and provisions made a sharp advance. Wheat advanced two and three cents per bushel and a stronger tone pervades all the markets. The people were convinced that the time had come for a change, and they changed.

ACCEPTS THE SITUATION.

Republican leaders are forced at last to accept the situation. Secretary of the Treasury Hon. Chas. Foster acknowledges that the tariff was the main issue. Uncle Jerry Rusk, secretary of agriculture, plainly gives his opinion that the tariff was the whole and sole cause of it. Whitelaw Reid states that "obviously, many republicans thought the tariff had gone too far." Senator Cullom is quite definite in attributing the result to the McKinley bill. He stated plainly that the people expected a revision of the tariff in the direction of the reduction of duties, and were dissatisfied with so many increases; that the senate cut out many increases, but the conference committee restored enough of them to put the republican party on the defensive and at a great disadvantage. Chauncey M. Depew admits that the election of Cleveland shows the acceptance by the country of the theory of tariff for revenue. He only hopes to see the reduction of that theory to practice. He will see that, if he survives the terrible shock. He and many other partisan republicans would be glad to have the democratic administration make such sweeping changes in the tariff as to seriously affect at least some of the great business interests, and through them the whole trade of the country. This hope is vain. The democrats did not perpetrate the folly when in power before when they began putting their theory into practice by means of the Mills bill. Indeed the criticism of the republicans was that they did not go far enough to prove their policy; and such criticism will be heard again. The sages among the tariff reform men, such as John G. Carlisle and Frank Hurd, have all along admitted that, as the fostering of favored industries has reached such a height and established such conditions, that those who seek to reduce the highest duties must hasten slowly, in the interest of and care for the country's general business.

A LITTLE BUSINESS TALK.

Now that the election is over and a glorious victory secured, it is wise and proper that democrats should seriously consider ways and means of perpetuating the democratic party in power.

There is no reason why the state of Ohio should not remain in the democratic faith. There was never such an opportunity of solidifying the party in this state. What with the internal dissensions in the republican party and the utter and absolute repudiation of Governor McKinley and his obnoxious tariff legislation, there is the best chance in the world for sustaining and maintaining the supremacy of democracy in Ohio.

In order to do this, however, one thing is absolutely necessary, and, without it, all else is vain. That one thing is ORGANIZATION.

The Bee has a few suggestions to make relative to the party locally. Lucas county is still republican? Why is it so? The unobservant will say it is because there are more republicans than democrats in the county. This is a misconception.

There are 82 precincts in Lucas county. A change of eight votes in each precinct would make Lucas reliably democratic.

There is no one who knows how the democratic party runs its campaigns in the county but knows that twice, probably thrice, that number is lost at every election.

Yes, it is a fair average to place the loss at eight to every precinct during registration, eight more during the polling and eight more during the count of votes.

Inattention to registration and in getting out the vote, and carelessness and ignorance in counting the votes, is the cause of republican supremacy in Lucas county. Nothing else.

But, it will again be said, why is this not true of the republicans? It is not true because they have excellent discipline through organization. They have their sharpest and shrewdest workers on the election board, in the voting booths, and in the various precincts, all working for party success.

Mr. E. W. Tolerton, of the election board, informs the writer that it was the hardest kind of work to get democratic judges and clerks to act at the recent election. Not so with the republicans. They had their lists of judges and clerks ready for the board, and every man of them was a worker from experience and a republican from principle.

This is the kind of work that counts. It is organization that wins victories, and without it the local democracy might as well be whistling against the wind.

Let there be democratic organizations in every ward. Let the ward clubs send delegates to a central body and let their representatives there see to it that every representative from a member of the board of elections down to the ward worker be a pushing, energetic business democrat.

This is a matter well worthy of consideration, and the Bee's columns are open to all who desire to discuss it for the general good.

THANK YOU, GENTLEMEN.

At a meeting of the democratic central and executive committees of Lucas county to-day, the following resolution was offered and carried unanimously:

Whereas, The Toledo Bee has, by its able, efficient and tireless zeal, championed the cause of progressive democracy in the campaign, and given hope and strength to each voter in the great fight between the people and the beneficiaries of special federal legislation; therefore be it

WHOOP-LA!

Up Goes the Price of Wheat and Clover,

Caused by the Election of Gallant Grover—Hope for the Farmer the Country Over.

Things were to go to hades entirely if Cleveland was elected.

Farmers and toilers, you heard the cry, did you not?

Had you been on 'change this morning you would have seen how things have changed the prediction.

Wheat is away up and going higher. Clover seed jumped from 50 cents to 65 cents and is still going up.

Stocks are advancing rapidly and—the country is saved.

The farmer has been vindicated, and in the prosperity of the farmer lies the continued prosperity of the country generally.

It looked like old times on 'change this morning.

Every advance was greeted with cheers, and Billy Morehouse and Charlie Stager were in their element.

F. N. Quale and Thomas Taylor were smiling and saying "I told you so."

Mr. R. T. Thorpe, a member of the board, and representing Kennith, Hopkins & Co., of Chicago and New York, was asked by a Bee as to the cause of the general advance.

"It means simply a restoration of the confidence of the people. The people have confidence in Grover Cleveland and his administration. The prospects for a continuance of our present prosperity was never better or brighter, and the business men of the country are confident of Cleveland's business ability."

Mr. Frank I. King, president of the board is too good a republican to give the policy of his party away. He said:

"The recent improvement in price of wheat is mostly due to the November crop report. It was issued Thursday and was a surprise to the trade, estimating the wheat crop of the United States at 500,000,000 bushels, while the October report indicated 519,000,000 and some of the state reports since indicated still more. Yes, I voted for Harrison and think it would have been better for the country if he had succeeded, but there is no occasion for any alarm, such as some radical republican papers are trying to create. Trade may be restricted a little until the democratic policy is defined by congress, but the senate is nearly a tie and will prevent any radical measures. Blaine's reciprocity ideas and a little tariff reform is about all the democrats will undertake. With Whitney, Brice and such business men as advisers Cleveland will not jeopardize the business interests of the country."

PRESIDENT CALLAWAY

Speaks Regarding the Alleged Clover Leaf

Difficulty—The Preferred Stockholders Are Largely Old Bond Holders of the Narrow Gauge System and Are Aggrieved.

President Callaway, speaking to a Bee in regard to a statement published relative to a meeting of Clover Leaf railroad preferred stockholders at Boston to protest against the issuance of the additional mortgage and incidentally criticising the management of the company, said: "I have no knowledge of the meeting further than what I read in the newspapers, but presumed that such a meeting had been held.

"The preferred stockholders of the company were largely the old bond holders of the narrow gauge system. Under their contract with the people who furnished the money to change the gauge and supply rolling stock, they were to have a preference over the common stock in the payment with the common stockholders. They are now apparently attempting to enforce a compliance with their demands for participation in the management by withholding their consent to the issuance of additional securities and making exaggerated reports of the company's condition a pretext for their action.

"The statement that the earnings could be doubled without any additional outlay is absurd for the reason that the road is now unable to properly handle the volume of business which is offering without additional engines, cars and other facilities.

"The statement that no annual report had been issued for the past 7 years until this year is true and arrives from the fact that the line was in the hands of the construction company who did not turn it over to the railroad company until June, 1891. In a full report of the operation for the year ending June, 1892, has been furnished to all stockholders and as far as Mrs. Callaway was concerned, he said, no information had ever been withheld from anyone having any interest in the property.

"As stated in the annual report, a very large amount of money is needed to supply facilities to keep pace gith the growth of the company's business. If the preferred stockholders decline to allow any increase in the mortgage debt some other plan must be devised to raise additional capital."

Mr. Callaway handed the Bee a copy of the annual report issued June 30, which shows that the earnings of the road in 1892 have increased over those of the previous year 24 per cent. and over the year of 1888, 314 per cent. President Callaway said it was quite natural that the preferred stockholders felt aggrieved at their losses. Narrow gauge systems in this part of the country were an entire failure, but he thought that if capital were put into the present broad-gauge road their securities would within a reasonable time become valuable.

AND STILL THEY COME.

A New Industry for East Toledo.

Wheel and Bicycle Works To Be Established—Company Organized and in Shape.

The East Side is to have another new industry.

The projectors have not been deterred by the election of Grover Clevland either. Strange, isn't it?

Some weeks ago the Bee mentioned the fact that L. S. Baumgardner and others were engineering a large bicycle company plan.

The scheme has been consolidated with another of greater proportions, and together they are being pushed and success is assured.

An iron wheel company is being organized in connection with the bicycle works. Mr. Baker, of the firm of Baker & Flory, of East Toledo, and Mr. L. S. Baumgardner are the projectors. The company has been formed, and the stock is being rapidly taken.

The works will be located on the East Side, just where has not yet been definitely settled.

EVERY GARMENT IS GUARANTEED AS REPRESENTED, AND IF YOU ARE NOT PERFECTLY SATISFIED WE WILL CHEERFULLY REFUND THE MONEY PAID.

The world grows wiser as it grows older. Four centuries of civilization have made America first and foremost among the nations of the world.

Twenty years of honest, conscientious buying and selling has made the name of Mockett the standard the country over—Mockett—the name suggests the acme of clothing, elegance to the mind of the Toledoan---Mockett's clothing shop. It's full of interest for men, women and children. Critical trade has put the approval stamp upon Mockett's clothing.

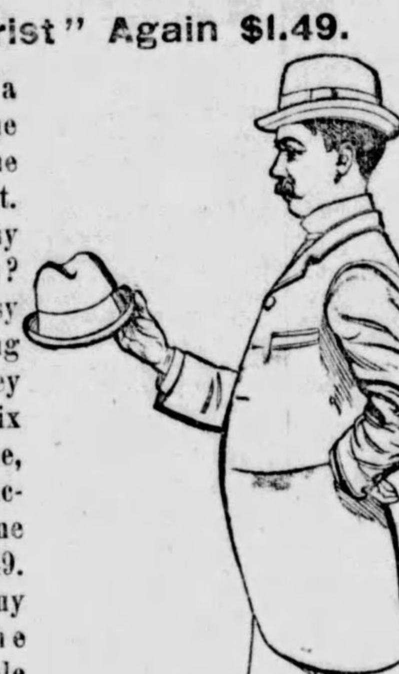
THE SUIT DEPARTMENT is showing a particularly attractive line of the latest winter styles in gentlemen's suits. They're pictured to-day in Black and Fancy Cheviots, single and double breasted Sack and Cutaway assortments. It is, without doubt, the largest and choicest assortment ever displayed in Toledo, and will meet every demand of our phenomenally increased trade. They were placed on sale Wednesday at $10. $12 and $15 each, an assortment aggregating $75,000 to choose from at the three prices, and every suit was made for this winter's wear. Compare them in price and all the points of desirability. They are perfect in fit and workmanship, and bear the stamp of superiority. They're made from the right stuffs, they're the right styles, and the assortment is wide enough to cover any fancy and we guarantee them equal to any $25 or $30 suit your tailor will make you. Think of the saving! Our price $10, $12 and $15.

"Wonder why more people don't wear gloves in America?" Why across the "Pond" they'd as soon think of going without a hat as without gloves. Suppose it's an American idea. Still Americans are progressive, and we're confident after you've seen our glove exposition it will fill you with interest. It represents the best efforts of the best glove makers of the world over. Unworthy makes are not here, neither are unworthy prices. Hundreds will take advantage of our cheap glove buying opportunities. There's no reason why you should not be one them. Of course we're showing The Perrin and Dent's, in all weights for dress and street. You know they're imported.

Here are some price wonders:

Boys' fine Jersey Gloves, 25c, 40c and 50c.
Boys' Woolen Gloves, 25c, 35c and 50c.
Boys' Kid Gloves and Mittens, 50c, 75c and $1.
Men's Heavy Working Gloves and Mittens, both lined and unlined, 50c, 75c, $1 and $1.25.
Men's Fine Jersey Gloves, 50c and 75c.
Men's Genuine Scotch Gloves, 50c, 75c and $1.
Men's Kid Gloves, for street and dress wear, $1, $1.25, $1.50 and $175.
Men's Heavy Lined Kid Gloves and Mittens, 75c, $1, $1.25 and $1.50.

The "Tourist" Again $1.49.



The "Tourist." It's a hat, a new shape, the latest conception of the season. You've seen it. You admire it. Why don't you wear one? They're neat and dressy and the proper thing for winter wear. They have just arrived, a six case lot. The price, originally $2, commencing Monday, for one week, they're $1.49. After that $2 will buy one. Of course the shades are the desirable ones.

There's thoughts of Overcoats commingled with this weather.

The flurry of snow on Wednesday evening reminds us of the cold blustry winter days fast approaching, and suggests a comfortable Ulster as a health preserver from the bleak winds, snow and rain.

We've been prepared for this for several weeks and to-day place on sale an assortment of 1,000 street car drivers and teamsters Ulsters and Overcoats at $10 and $12 each. They were originally made to sell for $12 and $15. Every garment is guaranteed as represented and if you are not perfectly satisfied we will cheerfully refund the money paid. Remember the price—$10 and $12.

We place them freely, fearlessly into the scale of public criticism. Take a tour of the town, compare them with the Riff-Raff and Rubbish offered at many places and we are satisfied you will come back and acknowledge that the greatest loss would have been your's had you purchased elsewhere. Remember these coats are Bright, Brand New and absolutely Perfect, and the price ten and twelve dollars.

Of course there are others—scores of them. The material, that's different too, and the prices range from $12 to $14, then to $16 and $18 gets a better one, and $20 buys a beauty.

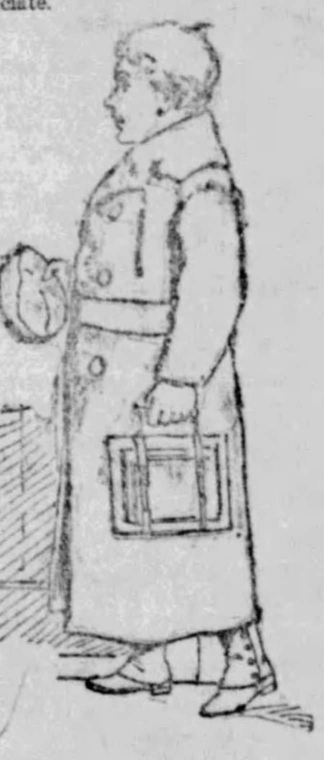
The most fascinating spot here—to many—is the boys' section. The new season's styles have made their advent with all the contrasts of size and style, material and workmanship, and diversities of effect that will please and surprise.

The popular novelties we offer, of course, first and best, the charming fashions that make our store the great center for Children's Garments.

There's a distinct drift this season to solidity in the clothing of the boys. You will notice it in the fashioning and the goods used. There's a good deal of double-breasted boys' wear. There's a good deal of Scotch Cheviot, or Scotch Cheviot style. This is good all around—for you and the boys, and for us. We like to sell good goods. Take notice this season of the prices.

The Overcoats and Ulsters form a scene of rare beauty, and delight the eyes of the little fellows. You're glad, too, and a welcome surprise awaits the mothers at the anticipation of the Long Cape Chumley, the Long New York Ulster, the Boston Reefer, the Double-Breasted Medium Box, and the new Double-Breasted Boys' Poole. The Poole is English, you know. The generous sack which has won favor across the pond and is in great demand on this side. They're shown in Cheviot, Melton, Kersey and Black, and Oxford Gray Beaver, and the prices range from $10 to $15.

There are others, scores of them, fashioned in a variety unexcelled in the Northwest, so prices that even the most meagre purse cannot fail to appreciate.



Imagine a Nobby Ulster or Overcoat for $3; a better one, of course, for $5, and a real beauty for $7.

Many of the designs are Entirely New, Original Conceptions or are the latest styles from Foreign Fashion Centers, made to our Special Order, and bear some of the many distinctive features that characterize the Garments in our Children's Section.

A LIVELY WEEK

Promised at the People's, Wonderland and Wheeler's.

Mr. Potter of Texas and Miss Roarer Will Discuss

A Knotty Affair, in Which the Kid and a Little Busy-Body Were Mixed Up In, Along With the Cowboy Pianist at Wonderland.

Next week will be a busy one at the theaters. Ullie Akerstrom will appear in two pieces. John C. Rice, formerly of Monroe and Rice, will put on a Knotty Affair. Mr. Potter of Texas, by the author of Mr. Barns of New York, will appear early in the week. The Kid, a new and bright musical comedy, will fill in the latter part of the week and the Wonderland will have its usual quota of attractions.

Variety will give way to comedy drama at the People's next week.

Ullie Akerstrom will be seen in two plays. For the first half of the week she will present a play written by herself, entitled "Miss Roarer," in which she assumes the leading role, Aurora. The play is in four acts and is said to be of a picturesque nature, combining the usual ingredients of deceit, love, hate, conspiracy, woman's faith, etc. There are many complications, also musical and terpsichorean diversions. A novel innovation in the play is a realistic fox hunt, in which is introduced mounted hunters in full chase, with Miss Akerstrom and her trained horse in the lead. A pack of foxhounds are also brought on. The play is especially adapted to display the peculiar style of acting of this little lady. She is a lively actress and her charming personality draws all hearts to her from the moment she puts her foot on the stage. She has an expression, child-like face, a slender, girlish figure and an unaffected simplicity of manner. Her dancing is said to be unique and graceful.

The story of the play is as follows:

A son quarrels with his father and leaves home, taking with him an infant daughter. On his way to Arizona by coach he is attacked by robbers and killed. The child is found by miners and is cared for by them. About this time the play opens and Miss Akerstrom appears as a wild child in Arizona, who can run, shoot, ride, in fact a very Tom-boy. A minister who is visiting the camp becomes acquainted with her and uses his influence to have the miners advertise and try to find her parents. After much urging he prevails upon them to do so. Her grandfather, a wealthy gentleman, is found. He has a niece and nephew who were his heirs up to the time of finding his grandchild. They try every means possible to prevent her from getting the old man's fortune, but "Roarer" is always on hand to prevent their villainous work.

The company is well selected and is augmented by a variety of vocal specialties in harmony with the play. Miss Akerstrom will also present her favorite comedy-drama, entitled "A Little Busybody," a play which gives her an excellent opportunity for the display of her abilities. Her dancing is of a high order, and her work as the half-witted boy in the third act is said to be highly creditable.

A Knotty Affair.

Some managers think that all that is needed to make a farce comedy go is to give it a catchy name, hire half a dozen variety performers and let them fill it full of slush and slang. This is not John C. Rice's idea in A Knotty Affair, which is his vehicle this season as it was last. It is a farce comedy, of course, and as such does not require a plot as perfect as the School for Scandal, or dialogue as deep as Hamlet. Unlike most of the farce comedies, however, A Knotty Affair has a good story and a plot of some complication. The plot is such a knotty affair that it is impossible to give an outline of it here. It contains half a dozen well drawn characters, of which the most important is that assumed by Mr. Rice, who makes it amazingly funny. Mr. Rice, who is best known still by his connection with George Monroe in the laughable farce My Aunt Bridget, bids fair to be among the most popular of American comedians. His latest creation shows Mr. Rice at his best; it enables him to exhibit his remarkable gifts as a dancer to the best possible advantage. His latest terpsichorean invention is a so-called atmospheric glide, in which he executes a number of startling fantastic steps. The play is full of novel specialties and the songs, of which there are a number, do not depend upon his own abilities alone. He has surrounded himself with a company of more than average ability. The soubrette of the organization is a charming combination of pertness, prettiness and dainty ways, Sallie Cohen by name. Miss Cohen has won for herself a high place in the esteem of the public. Other well-known people in the company are: Louise Hofer, Reni Ferrers, Hattie Haynes, Addie B. Boos, and Messrs. Will H. Sloan, F. C. Palmer, W. B. Danforth and Harry Wallace. All of these people are good actors and some of them can sing and dance. The scenic setting is unusually elaborate for a farce comedy, for it contains three beautiful scenes. There is a garden scene; a set showing the interior of a New York flat, and the third act takes place in the Metropolitan opera house of New York, of which a beautiful and accurate painting has been made especially for this production. A Knotty Affair will be presented at Wheeler's Wednesday evening under the management of Mr. Harry Sloan, who is well known as the right-hand man of the Hanlon Bros. in their great spectacular productions.

At Wonderland Music Theater.

It is a decidedly big show which is to be presented at this popular place of amusement the coming week, and the names on the bill are a sufficient guarantee of the excellence of the entertainment, and is as long as it is varied.

Foremost among the bright features to be seen in Curio hall will be A. O. Babel, the original cowboy pianist. His execution is said to be marvelous and is doubtless a master of the instrument; he composes and improvises. His program will consist of classic and popular music by the most famous composers. He will be assisted by Mattie Babel the cornet virtuoso.

Another remarkable person, and of recent discovery, is Unzie, of Australia, who has been christened the aboriginal beauty, and who possesses a head of snow white hair, which measures six feet in circumference, and stands out like unto an umbrella. Unzie's birthplace is Farrabaudra in the colony of New South Wales; was born in the year 1868, and from the aborigines who are darker than the American Indians.

Another personage with remarkable hirsute appendage is Orsono, known under the soubriquet of the "Wire Haired Man," who is like unto Sampson of Biblical renoun, as his strength lies in his hair, and by his hair alone, he is able to lift great weights.

Zorono will also be seen for the first time in Toledo, with her den of trained alligators which is something new and should be as interesting as it is novel.

The German Rose, the Lilliputian comedienne and instrumentalist, has also been booked, and will be seen both in Curio hall and theater, where the entertainment will be furnished bw Mowatt's Internationals, including Ben Mowatt and son, the clever club manipulators.

Zrwin and Grape, duellists, in their original act with electric effects and other artists of merit.

On Thursday afternoon every lady will be presented with an initial pin made by the wire artist.

Mr. Potter, of Texas.

"Mr. Potter, of Texas," A. C. Gunter's latest contribution to the stage, will be presented at Wheeler's Tuesday evening. Mr. Gunter's story, which contains certainly sufficient material for an interesting play, and Mr. Gunter's experience as a playwright, make it fair to suppose that as a dramatist he has done full justice to the material which he collected as a novelist. It has been claimed that "Mr. Potter, of Texas," was originally written in dramatic form and afterward novelized. Messrs. McVicker & Robb, ever on the alert for an attraction that will bring money to their coffers, at once secured the right of stage presentation, and since that time both gentlemen have realized an immense amount of money. This is in no small measure due to the efforts of that accomplished emotional actress, Miss Josephine Loane, who adds so much life and spirit to the performance. Her Lady Annerley has been favorably commented upon wherever witnessed. Mr. Harry Bradley keeps the audience in a roar as Mr. Potter. His metaphors are irresistible and his little touches of pathos are sublime.

The Kid Coming.

The Kid, a musical comedy that has made a great hit throughout the east, will be at Wheeler's Saturday evening with a strong company of comedians.

WYANDOT OFFICIAL.

Upper Sandusky, O., Nov. 12.—(Special)—The official count of the county shows the total vote to be 4,867, against 5,237 four years ago. This falling off is a surprise, as the vote was expected to be larger. Cleveland's majority, while quite large, does not reach expectations. It can be accounted for in the fact that a very quiet canvass was made. The official figures are as follows:

Harrison, 2,034; Cleveland, 2,833; Weaver, 62; Bidwell, 130; dem. plurality, 799.

Samuel Taylor, 2,034; W. A. Taylor, 2,837; dem. plurality, 803.

THOMAS NEILL CREAM.

Reported That He Has Made a Statement.

New York, Nov. 12.—A London dispatch says that Home Secretary Asquith had not, up to noon to-day, made any communication to the authorities of Clerkenwell jail relative to the case of Neill Cream, the American, who is to be hanged on Tuesday next.

The papers sent from the United States and owing to the delay in the receipt of which the home secretary was induced to grant a week's respite to the condemned man, reached Downing street yesterday.

It is not believed, however, that they contain anything that will justify the home secretary in again interfering with the execution of the sentence.

It is understood that Cream has made an important statement, and which is in the hands of his solicitor, Mr. Waters. It will not be published, however, until after the gibbet has done its work.

MAINE WENT

Republican and Democrat of One Idea.

Some Opinions From Up in the Pine Tree State.

What Is Talked of in Manley's Town.

A Question of Most Concern to Them.

New England and the Country Now Ready for Winter.

The fact that Maine went republican isn't of half as much importance to a sick man as the fact that winter is coming and that there are four or five months of dangerous weather before him, during which time he is more likely to fail than to gain.

To be forewarned is to be forearmed. The experience of others who have been sick and have become well should be heeded.

Listen to a few of the people in Portland who last season proved, as Dartmouth's greatest scientist and the best physicians of all schools and people of all creeds and parties have been constantly proving, that Paine's celery compound is the best remedy in the world.

Paine's celery compound is not a patent medicine, it is not a sarsaparilla or a tonic. It is as far removed from all these as the east is from the west, and, as a well-known New York physician has said, it is as superior to them all as the diamond is to ordinary glass.

From Portland.

John W. Perkins & Co.—From our great increase in sales and the general reports that come from our customers, Paine's celery compound stands at the head as a brain and nerve tonic. We have no doubt that it is its intrinsic merit that has given it its great sales and its public standing as the best medicine to substantially build up the system.

William H. Griffin, 21 Warren street—I had a cancer in my hip and had to have it cut out and I was very weak from the loss of blood. I could not sleep and had no appetite. I tried a sarsaparilla, but it did me no good. Some one told me of Paine's celery compound and I tried two bottles. Now I can sleep well nights, have a good appetite, and am able to work again. I gladly recommend it.

Mrs. Richard Gatley, 74 Smith street—Last winter I was all run down, my blood would settle in large spots as large as my hand. After taking Paine's celery compound, they went away. I have not been troubled all summer. I have told others about the compound and many are using it and finding it a great help to them also. I was so sick I could scarce keep around, but as soon as I started taking the compound I was like another person.

W. R. Gribbin, 224 Franklin street—I have used your compound and have received great benefit from its use. Last spring I was troubled with shortness of breath and heart trouble, and the doctor told me I was bordering on nervous prostration. I saw an advertisement of Paine's celery compound in the paper and tried a bottle, and I soon found I could breathe easier and my heart did not trouble me so much. I had a bad leg, from my knee down. It was as hard as a piece of wood, and so sore I could hardly walk, and itched terribly, so I could not sleep. I would have to scratch it until my leg was all raw. Paine's celery compound helped me. My leg is well. I recommend the compound for my friends. They all know how bad I was and what has helped me.

James A. Campbell, 22 Monument square—I have had the dyspepsia and catarrh of the nose. I felt all tired out and dumpish at times. I have taken several bottles of a sarsaparilla, but it did not help me. I took one bottle of Paine's celery compound and it has helped me, and I am taking more and improving.

Mrs. G. D. Jost, 65 Free street—I would like to say that we are using Paine's celery compound in our family and are much pleased with the result. We consider it an excellent medicine and guarantee it to our friends.

Wherever He Goes.

George A. Wilson, with the Maine Central Railroad company—My wife has been ailing for six years past. Most of the time she has been unable to do her household duties. She was unable to sleep nights and had no appetite, was very nervous and had a very severe headache all the time. She was at times troubled with lameness in her limbs so she could hardly step. She tried different remedies and physicians, but they did her no good. She has now taken three bottles of the compound and is on the fourth and it has done more good than anything she ever took. She has no headache and a good appetite, and did her own washing for the first time in two years last week. She thinks there is nothing that will compare with Paine's celery compound and I have recommended this remedy to no less than ten different persons and they have tried it and say it is helping them. My business is all over the state of Maine and when I hear persons complaining I recommend Paine's celery compound, and I shall continue to recommend it wherever I go.

Oil Notes.

D. Armstrong is drilling No. 2 on his farm in Noble township.

The Ohio Oil company has completed No. 2 on the Thomas Jones farm, in Moulton township, Auglaize county. It is good for about 20 barrels.

The Mass Oil company has nearly 1,000 acres of land under lease southwest of here and is rigging up for a test well on the Chris Markus farm.

The location is not far distant from the Frey farm and will materially help in developing that field.

The Lima Natural Gas company developed quite a freak while drilling in a gas well on the Drake farm. When the gas sand was struck at about 12 feet in, the well commenced flowing salt water and when it had been drilled 8 feet deeper a strong pocket of gas was struck. This is something phenomenal and the first occurrence of its kind in the history of this field.

The Auglaize County oil report for the month of October shows a total of 12 completed wells with a production of 526 barrels against 17 completed wells with a production of 693 barrels in September. There are 7 wells drilling and 17 rigs up, against 9 wells drilling and 15 rigs up, the month previous.

The Ohio Oil company has comlpeted No. 6 on the Armstrong farm, near the feeder and is good for 40 barrels. Their No. 6 on the D. J. Hamilton farm, same section, is in and good for 30 barrels. No. 7 on the same farm is drilling. The same company has completed and shot No. 3 on the Fisk heirs' farm in Noble township. It is good for 40 barrels. The same company is drilling No. 2 on the Mackenbach farm, same township. The same company is in the sand on No. 1 on the Schroederluke farm, while their No. 1 on the W. Armstrong farm is also completed and only a small producer.

An important test well and one that will show whether or not there is an oil field southwest of this city is being drilled by the New Bremen Home Oil company on the Kohlhorst farm, about four miles west of New Bremen and seven miles southwest of here. The well will come in some time this week and should oil in paying quantities be found there would no longer be any doubt that an oil field exists in that locality. Oil in light quantities has been found in that neighborhood, as the Urbana Natural Gas company's wells on the Grieshop farm, are all showing more or less of the crude.

Several miles east are also several small producers on the Dickman farm, while to the northeast are the Schroeder, Frey, and Luedeke farm weels. Most of the land surrounding the Kohlhorst farm has been gobbled up by leasers and there will no doubt be a great deal of drilling done there this coming winter.

Supreme quietude reigns in the oil field at the present time, but this will hardly hold up for any length of time as there are still thousands of acres of undeveloped territory that may be rich with Trenton rock crude. The territory lies northwest and south of St. Marys, while to the west is the great reservoir field, that has beent thoroughly punctured. It might be safely said that the Auglaize county oil field is till in its infancy and the supposition among various operators now is that a second pay could be found in the heart of the oil field if drilled for. This may be true, but a number of wells have been drilled to the depth of 100 feet in the oil bearing strata with n oindication of a second pay. A well -knownoperator said the other day that he would not be in the least surprised if some of the wells along the east and north banks of the great reservoir would be drilled to a greater depth, in hppes of developing another pay, as they have declined so that they scarcely justify pumping.

You will remember the condition I was in five years ago, when I was afflicted with a combination of diseases, and thought there was NO HELP FOR ME. I tried all kinds of medicines, and scores of eminent physicians. My nerves were prostrated, producing dizziness, heart trouble and all the ills that make life miserable. I commenced to take and in three months I WAS PERFECTLY CURED. In my travels each year, when I see the thousands of physical wrecks, suffering from nervous prostration, taking prescriptions from local physicians who have no knowledge of their case, and whose death is certain, I feel like going to them and saying, "GET DR. MILES' NERVINE AND BE CURED." In my profession, where there are so many sufferers from overwork, mental prostration and nervous exhaustion, brought on by the character of the business engaged in, I would recommend "MILES' NERVINE" as a sure cure for all suffering from these causes.

FINDLAY.

CATARRH, NOT LOCAL, BUT CONSTITUTIONAL.

Dr. Dio Lewis, the eminent Boston physician, in a magazine article says: "A radical error underlies nearly all medical treatment of catarrh. It is not a disease of the man's nose; it is a disease of the man, showing itself in the nose—a local exhibition of a constitutional trouble." Therefore, he argues, the use of snuff and other local applications is wrong, and while they seem to give temporary relief, they really do more harm than good. Other leading authorities agree with Dr. Lewis. Hence, the only proper method of cure for catarrh is by taking a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, reaching every part of the body through the blood, does eliminate all impurities and makes the whole man healthier. It removes the cause of the trouble and restores the diseased membrane to proper condition. That this is the practical result is proven by thousands of people who have been cured of catarrh by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS.

New York, Nov. 12.—A Berlin dispatch says that the delegates to the national congress of the social democratic party, and which opens on Monday, are arriving in large numbers.

The independent socialists, composed of secessionists from the social democrats are especially well represented, and it is evident that they intend to cause as much trouble as possible before the congress.

It is thought that on account of the numerous hostile elements the gathering will be marked by many antagonistic scenes.

STOMACH DISEASES

Can Be Cured by the Science of Diet

AND FRESH VEGETABLE JUICES.

Leading Citizens of Toledo and From Different Parts of the World Permanently Cured.

Stomach diseases cannot be permanently cured without practicing the science of DIET, which teaches what to eat and what not to eat in all the varied forms of stomach troubles. Many victims of dyspepsia have been doped with strong drugs until they have felt as though death would be a blessed relief from their sufferings.

In order to cure the disease you must remove the cause. Stomach diseases are principally produced by eating and drinking improper foods, which either on account of their chemical nature or mode of preparation do not agree with the patient. The first thing to do then by way of setting the stomach and bowels right is to get a scientifically prepared DIET CHART of what to eat and drink in your particular case, and the next step is to get certain FRESH VEGETABLE JUICES which will act in harmony with the food prescribed, in restoring the stomach to its natural action.

Many people have a mistaken idea that to DIET means to live in a semi-state of starvation, but the fact is that DIETING simply enables a dyspeptic to live better off of the vast variety of things that agree with him, and avoiding a few articles of food that cause all the trouble in the stomach. If you have stomach or bowel troubles do not allow cheap quacks to make you believe that it is caused by some other disease, but place yourself under the treatment of the skilled European specialist, Dr. Kalkhoff, whose medical institution is located at 505, 507 and 509 Summit street, between Oak and Orange, Toledo, Ohio. A free copy of Dr. Kalkhoff's large illustrated medical book, "The Safeguards of Life," will be given free at his office or sent free to any address on receipt of 6 cents in stamps to pay postage on book. This book explains the cause and cure of all kinds of chronic and desperate diseases, and contains the testimonials of leading citizens of Toledo, and from all parts of the globe, who have been permanently cured of the worst forms of stomach and other chronic diseases.

LATE MARKETS.

There has been considerable firmness in the Chicago wheat market to-day. Opening prices were lower, but the loss was regained. Later the market lost some of its strength. New York was quoted dull and lower.

Corn has been weak and closes lower on light receipts. Of course the markets work unreasonably. On light receipts prices were to be better, but it comes slow. The news of the day is in favor of wheat, except English markets, which are dull and weak.

In New York the market closed at 12 o'clock: No. 1 wheat at 76 1-8; December at 77 1-8, a loss of 1-2; May, 84 1-4, a loss of 3-8. November corn at 50 3-8; December at 51, a gain of 1-8; May 1-2 lower at 53 1-4. November oats at 36, a loss of 1-4.

In Chicago November wheat closed at 72 5-8; December at 73 5-8; May at 79 1-4, a loss of 3-8. November corn 41 7-8, a loss of 1-8; December at 42, a loss of 1-4; May at 57 3-8, a loss of 1-4. November oats at 31 1-4, a loss of 1-4.

In Toledo there has been a fair amount of trading in the market for wheat futures. For a Saturday the market has done very well. Prices are a shade lower, but the tone of the market is firm: December sold at 75 and closed at 74 3-4; May sold at 80 5-8 to 81 and closed at 80 3-4, a loss on each of 1-4.

Cash wheat was firm, but the sales were light. No. 2 soft sold and closed at 74c, unchanged. No. 3 soft sold at 67@67 1-4c. The feature of the cash wheat market is the steady appreciation of the grades below the contract. No. 4 soft 60c. Rejected No. 1 at 61 1-2c; No. 2 at 54c, with No. 2 at 71 1-2@73c.

Corn—No. 2, 43 1-2c; No. 3 at 42 1-2c. Rye—No. 2 at 54c.

Clover seed was again very strong and active. Prices are on the rampage. March seed advanced 45c. Prime medium sold at $7.50@7.85; November at $7.80; January at $8.00; February at $8.05; March at $7.70@8.10; No. 2 at $7.25@7.70; rejected at $6.90@7.25.

A REGATTA COMMITTEE

Appointed by the Ohio Yacht Club.

Yachts Will Be Constructed and An Interest in Yachting Affairs Revived—Other Matters.

A meeting of the Ohio Yacht club was held last evening, Commodore Gunckel in the chair. The principal business was to appoint a regatta committee. Commodore Gunckel intends that during his term of office the club shall be a yacht club in every sense of the word. He visited the members and found four who were just the men to look after the affairs of the club on the sea. They were Capt. Chas. Hubbard, Capt. John T. Mellink, Capt. Henry T. Marshall and Capt. Chas. W. Klauser. Mr. Marshall did not have time to give to the matter as a committeeman, so the others were appointed as the committee with Capt. Hubbard chairman. Mr. Marshall will be around and help though, as he is a way out of sight yachtsman. The commodore stated that several new yachts would be constructed for next season and that a race had already been arranged. Capt. Mat Horigan, who hails from the port of Oswego, was made an honorary member of the club in appreciation of his generosity in giving the club the use of his schooner Oliver Mitchell for the phantom ship on Columbian day.

Harry C. Elliott was elected a member. Elegant year books were received from the Southern Yacht club, of New Orleans, and the Carolina Yacht club.

The O. Y. C. is right in ship shape, and all is smooth sailing, which all goes to prove that good fishermen make good yachtsmen.

SENECA MARRIAGES.

Tiffin, O., Nov. 12.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Weaver, at Fort Seneca, was the scene of a very pleasant wedding Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock. About 60 invited guests assembled to witness the marriage of their daughter Flora to G. W. Shuman, of Hobert, Ind. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Orton Wagner, of Maumee, O., and Rev. Catar, assistant, of Bettsville. Miss Lena Rhein played the wedding march while the bride and bridegroom, accompanied by Miss Ora Kemp, of Fostoria, and A. C. Shuman, of Tiffin, as bridesmaid and bridesman, marched to a position facing a bank of white and red chrysanthemums, where the "ring ceremony" was performed. After the ceremony a very beautiful supper was furnished, to the enjoyment of all, and Mr. and Mrs. Shuman were made doubly happy by the congratulations of their friends and the presentation of very many excellent gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Shuman left Friday for Hobert, Ind., their future home. Mr. Shuman is the proprietor of a jewelry store at that place, and has built up a very flourishing trade.

Mr. W. S. Carroll and Miss Hattie A. Gillaum were married last Thursday evening at the home of the bride, corner of Jefferson and Perry streets, by Rev. J. W. H. Brown. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of friends.

Mr. Chas. McKenne and Miss Cora Kershner were married last Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents in Mechanicsburg addition.

At 9 o'clock Thursday morning, at Berwick, Mr. Joseph Wenner and Miss Jennie Seren were united in marriage by the Rev. Father Arnoldi. Both parties are well known in this city.

Mr. Frank Bollinger, of Yory City, Pa., and Miss Laura Myers, of Old Fort, were married by the Rev. J. W. H. Brown, last Thursday morning.

THE MEANNESS OF GAMBLING.

One of the saddest vices of these days is the vice of gambling, and I often wonder if our young men ever stop to think what gambling really is. The pit-falls of the rising man seem to grow more numerous in spite of the effort of our chief magistrate to have them abolished. Vice does not always flaunt its wares on our crowded thoroughfares in scarlet, nor do rogues appear in state prison stripes. Gambling and dishonesty is reduced to a science, and the most successful rogues are those dressed in the garb of respectability. The gambler argues that a man has a perfect right to risk his money as he chooses. If he wins or loses it is his own business.

Gambling, at the very heart of it, is mean. It always means getting something for nothing. The same way in betting. No man ever bets, but he intends taking the wager from the man he is betting with, be it five dollars or a thousand. He wants the money for nothing. There is no dishonesty so mean as putting your hand in a brother's pocket and taking his money and giving him nothing in return. There may have been a big error committed in our city a few days ago, but it is too late to fix up maters at this period of time's progress.

When one stops and thinks of "our neighbor," not the rich one, not the poor one, not the chosen one, simply "our neighbor," the idea admits of no distinctions, offers no selections, and the man who will seek the life blood of another—and the one who willingly causes such action to be taken, in my mind are pretty low down in the human scale.

Flowers have their mission on earth, and when they grace the sick room of the gambler, may their sweetness, through his getting well days, teach him the better way, so when his time comes to lay pulseless beneath the shadow of death's dark wing again, he can say, "Thy will, O Lord, not mine, be done."

Here is room for thought. Take it home and figure it out.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION.

Set Lectures by Professor Bensly, of the University of Chicago.

The Society for the Extension of University Teaching has arranged to begin its work with a course of six lectures by Prof. Bensly of the University of Chicago, on the English Literature of the Victorian Era. This will comprise such authors as Tennyson, Robert Browning, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Algernon Swinburne, Matthew Arnold, William Morris, Dante Gabriel Rosetti and perhaps one or two of the most conspicuous poets and prose writers of this period. Dr. Harper, president of the Chicago University, secured Prof. Bensly from Cambridge, England, to aid the Chicago University in building up this work of university extension throughout the west.

Prof. Bensly has had wide experience in England, Australia and in the English provinces in South Africa in organizing and conducting this work. He is a profound scholar and a brilliant lecturer. All who are interested in the literature of the present century should not fail to hear these lectures. They will be conducted on the regular university extension plan, with syllabus, written exercises, class work and certificates from the Chicago university to those who complete the course. Those who desire only to hear the lectures and attend the class work without taking part, can of course have the privilege of so doing.

The fee for the entire course will be $1.00. The first lecture will be given in the High School building on Friday evening, November 18. Tickets will be on sale at the High School building and at Brown, Eager & Hull's on next Wednesday afternoon.

The University Extension lectures given last year were a great stimulus to thought and investigation upon the part of many, and it is hoped that this movement to interest the adult population in higher study will meet with the success that it deserves.

The University of Chicago will furnish an ample traveling library which will accompany each lecturer and will be accessible to all taking the course. This will obviate the necessity of buying so many books, and will not only furnish the works of the authors discussed, but the best critical literature pertaining to the subject.

Mr. Blaine's pen is of some worth in a financial sense. According to eastern report his political contributions to the North American Review cost the proprietor, Mr. Brice, $5,000. The republican national committee made overtures to secure the right to put it out in its entirety for a sum that was a half larger than that which the Review manager had paid for it. The offer was refused because the manager wanted to require the people to read the Review to obtain Mr. Blaine's views.

NEUHAUSEL BRO'S

LADIES, PERMIT US TO CALL YOUR ATTENTION TO

The Household Jewel!

As an Egg Beater, Cream Whipper, Cake Beater, etc., the Jewel has no equal. As a Drink Mixer of any kind it cannot be excelled. As an Ice Cream Freezer it surpasses anything of the kind in the market. The following are some of the essential points of superiority the Jewel has over all other Beaters:

1st—The whippers are made of spring steel tinned wires, the very best for beating purposes.

2d—The wires revolving with double action produce greater beating power, quicker motion and bring the eggs or parts to be beaten directly in contact with the wires besides holding a single egg in a narrow space the same as being beaten in a small bowl.

3d—As an ice cream freezer it is a little gem; place in a pail, pack ice around it, beat thoroughly until it starts to freezing, then let it stand until frozen solid. Cream when freezing does no expand like water, therefore it does not break the jar.

4th—Take the white of a fresh egg and in forty seconds you can beat it so you can turn the jar upside down.

5th—It can also be used as a measure and is marked as follows: 1 pint, 1 1-2 pints, 1 quart, 1 1-2 quarts, 2 quarts; also takes the place of scales in weighing sugar, flour, etc.

6th—It excels all stationary beaters, as it can be moved to any part of the kitchen, used on the table, or a lady can use same as a coffee mill on the lap.

7th—The Jewel is the only beater with a tight fitting cover which prevents the most objectionable feature with all other egg beaters, namely: spattering and allowing dirt or flies to get into the batter. For mixing lemonade, milk shake or any other drink it is perfect. PRICE $1 EACH.

TICKLISH BOARDER

Or the Antics of An Insurance Agent.

A Tale of Domestic Infelicities

Which Ends in the Divorce Court.

Margaretha Was Entirely Too Playful.

She Professes To Be Afraid of Her Husband, and Is Granted Legal Separation.

New York, Nov. 12.—Mrs. Margaret Heim, of 168 Essex street, has been granted a limited divorce from her husband, Morris Heim, in the court of common please. They were married in this city on March 31, 1886, and lived together until December 28, last, when the wife left the husband on account of his cruelty, she said. Their only child is a little girl.

Mrs. Heim stated that she has employment of her own as bookkeeper and cashier in a drug store. She can make her own living, and all she wanted of her husband was to give something for the support of the child, which, since the estrangement between them, he did voluntarily, and only ceased to do so when she assumed an actively hostile attitude by commencing the action against him. He is an agent of the John Hancock Life Insurance company.

The wife swore that on November 15 last, when they were living at 455 Eighth avenue, her husband, after they had some words, threw a cup of milk at her. It missed striking her by only two inches. Two weeks later they got to quarreling again, and he slapped her in the face in the presence of her mother. Those were the only two instances of actual violence she had to bring against him, but, she said, he was constantly in the habit of calling her bad names.

She admitted that her husband often visited her since she left him; but she said he came principally, if not entirely, to see the child. Even so recently as the late Columbus celebration he came to her with a ticket for a lady and child to see one of the parades. He said to her if she could not go herself she should get another lady to go and take the child. She did go and the husband passed them by and said "Good-day" to the child and pursued his way. She admitted that he asked her a number of times to come back to him, but she refused to do so, "because," said she, "we cannot agree and never did agree together."

Adolph Meschow, an insurance agent, residing at 1280 Third avenue, was a boarder in the Heim household. He appeared on the wife's side and said he lived with them for about four years and knew them intimately. He remembered the husband throwing the cup of milk at his wife.

Meschow admitted that he loaned Mrs. Heim money sometimes, and unlike many a borrower, she repaid it to him. "I have always sympathy,' said he, excusing himself for being so hard on Heim, "for a wife that is ill used, and therefore I must tell the truth."

He knew Mrs. Heim before she was married, and his furnished room he had hired from her mother, Mrs. Wagner. He denied that he was a boarder; he only had the room and his breakfast. Finally Mr. Heim ordered him out of the house and he left. He admitted that since Mrs. Heim left her husband, over nine months ago, he has seen her about twice a week; but it was only in the course of his business as an insurance collector.

"Did not Mrs. Heim throw you on the floor once?"

"No: she never threw me on the floor, because she is not strong enough. But that was some time ago. She and Mr. Heim were both younger then and fooled a great deal; and, perhaps I tumbled down, too."

"Did you tumble down?" asked the court.

"Well, I suppose Idid," was the answer.

"Did you fall from sympathy with the lady?"

"Well perhaps I stumbled over his or her foot."

To Lawyer Gibbons he said he thought he might have fallen on his knees.

"I presume Mrs. Heim came over and picked you up?"

"She did not, or lay a hand on me except perhaps, on my shoulder."

"How often did familiarity like that occur?"

"Only once. But I don't call that familiarity. Besides then, she never put her hand near me, except to shake hands with me and say good-bye."

"You have frequently been out in the street with Mrs. Heim?"

"Only by order of Mr. Heim, because he was too lazy to take her out. Sunday afternoons he would lie down on the sofa, and if his wife asked him to go out with her he would say: "Never mind; I am too lazy. Take Meschow.' So generally she and I went out and took the baby along."

"You saw Mrs. Heim the day that she and her child went to see the parade?"

"I did not. Whoever says so is an infernal liar. I only knew she had a ticket."

"How did you know she had a ticket?"

"I was at her house twice a week, as I said, and she told me her husband had given her a ticket to see the procession."

Being asked if any other business than insurance brought him to Mrs. Heim's house, where she resides with her parents, Meschow replied, "Yes, her father is a barber, and at present is short of means. He does not pay me anything, but shaves me and cuts my hair, and I pay the insurance."

Mrs. Amelia Wagner, the wife's mother, who is hard of hearing, said among other things, that in the rows between her daughter and son-in-law she always took the son-in-law's part.

Heim, the husband, in defense, said that on December 28 last his wife left him without his knowledge when he had gone to his business, and took the child and most of the furniture with her. He positively denied that he ever threw a cup of milk at her, ever slapped her or ever called her an unbecoming name.

The general conduct of his wife during the last two or three years, he said, was vedy indiscreet. She was in the habit of going out when his back was turned or when he was at business, as he discovered when he returned home unexpectedly sometimes. Frequently, in the presence of his wife and her mother, he ordered Meschow out of the house. On the Sunday night following last Thanksgiving, Meschow wanted to go out for beer. Heim told him not bring any more beer into the house.

"What in thunder have you got to say about it? You are crazy," said Meschow, continuing his way down to the saloon on the ground floor. Heim jumped up and went down after him in his stocking feet and told the saloon man to sell Meschow no more beer for up-stairs. "That man is defying me in my own house," said Heim. But Meschow was already there and had his pitcher full, and Heim, seizing the pitcher, spilled some of the beer. Meschow grabbed the pitcher and spilled the rest of the beer over Heim, and then the two clinched. The saloon-keeper separated them and Heim went up-stairs.

He was scarcely in his own rooms again when Meschow came with beer. Heim again ordered him out of the house, and Heim's sister, who happened to be there, said to Meschow, "My brother wants you to leave, why don't you go? If you do not go, I shall get an officer. I have no more regard for you than for that dog lying in the corner,' referring to a dog that belonged to Meschow.

Finally Meschow left; but Heim was greatly surprised a little later to find him in bed as usual. "Then Heim said to his wife: "Is it possible that you allowed that villain in again?" Mrs. Heim made no reply, and Heim, to save further disturbance, retired for the night.

Heim was asked to state the circumstances about Meschow tumbling on the floor and said: "A great many times my wife would take him and tickle him. If she wanted ice cream she would tickle him. He was very ticklish and would fall on the floor most anywhere. During the first part of my married life I took all that for fun, but afterwards I reproved her for it. I said, 'Look here, Margaret, our child is getting older and is beginning to comprehend things and it is better to stop this nonesense."

He stated that after she left him he found her and the child living at 168 Essex street. He called there three or four days a week and always gave her some money and bought things for the child. While they lived together he supported not only her, but her father and mother, and he said some hard things of the father. He acknowledged he had once called his wife a dirty pig.

The judge did not think that such a degree of cruelty had been shown on the part of the husband as to justify a judgment against him on that ground, but he believed that the wife's dread of harm from him, which dread she swore was extreme, entitled her to a separation and he granted it.

COLD BUT DELIGHTFUL.

A Wintry Paradise in the Lofoden Islands Off Norway, Is the Resor to fNorwegian Beauty.

Would it surprise you to hear that the Lofoden islands, off Norway, are on their south side a terrestrial paradise? The gulf stream warms them all the year round, and the consumptives of the world enrich them by taking their cod liver oil. The cod liver oil boss is Peter Muller, who, I was told, employs 70,000 people in the fisheries, factories, bottling, packing, and so on. His daughters were the greatest catches in the Scandinavian marriage market. They married according to tastes, and happily. One of them chose from her many suitors a captain of the Norwegian navy, who left it on his marriage and became a distinguished marine painter.

There are pastoral Edens on the ledges of the Lofoden mountains. I never saw more grace in combination with the sort of craggy severity that one meets with on the west coast of Scotland, with this difference, however, that the Hebrides are as though painted in Indian ink, whereas the coloring in summer in the Lofoden scenery is indescribably splendid. I shall not easily forget how all new to it were lifted out of themselves by the sail through Raft Sund.

EXPLOSIVE DIAMONDS.

When Not Entirely Crystallized They May Explode.

It has long been known, says the Republic, that diamonds, especially the class known as the "rose diamonds," are likely to explode if subjected only to what would seem a very ordinary degree of heat, such as strong rays from the sun, etc. It is now believed that the explosions are the result of the rapid expansion of certain volatile liquids inclosed in cavities near the center of these precious stones. A great many diamonds, even though cut, mounted and worn as gems of perfection, are still in an unfinished condition—that is, the liquid drop from which the stone is being formed has not as yet deposited all of its "pure crystals of carbon." These movable drops may occasionally be seen with the naked eye. When this is the case a strong microscope will give the drop the appearance of a bubble in the fluid of a carpenter's level. It is also highy probable that besides the liquid mentioned these cavities may contain gases under great tension. This being the case, one may readily comprehend how a small amount of heat would cause the liquid and gas to expand to such a degree that the diamond would give way with all the characteristics of a miniature explosion.

THE FASHION MAKERS.

The Paris Salon the Birthplace of the World's Styles and Modes.

Who gives the mysterious word of order by virtue of which at the beginning of each season we see similar toilets blossom forth spontaneously and simultaneously in all places of elegant resort? How does it happen that these toilets are are different in cut and material from those that were worn in the preceding season?

Formerly it would have been easy to reply that the court was responsible for the creation of fashion, and in reality it was the empress, or one of the ladies of her suite, who took the initiative of wearing some new style of toilet, the result of long consultations between the lady herself and a dressmaker of genius. If the toilet pleased and was susceptible of adaptation to all the requirements of various types of feminine beauty, it would be accepted by the court, and from the court it would penetrate to the upper middle classes, and if it were not too dear, it would finally permeate to the ranks of the lower middle classes.

Nowadays, however, we have no court, and it is certainly not the democratic balls and receptions of President Carnot and his ministers that we may look for new manifestations of feminine elegance. Nevertheless, the creation of fashion continues in the same conditions as in the past, only with more liberty and perhaps with more artistic preoccupations. The great ladies of the imperial court have not all abdicated; other great ladies have been born with the genius of elegance and the gift of taste; and these, together with the most elegant women of the rich middle classes, the stage, and the demi-monde, co-operating with the great artists like Worth, Felix, Doucet, Rodrigues, Doucet, Morin-Blossier, Laferiere, etc., and, meeting on the neutral ground of the trying-on room, discuss, create and perfect the new fashions.

When once created, much in the same way as in the time of the empire, by the combined efforts of the princesses of elegance and of the dressmakers of genius, the new fashions are no longer propagated as they were of old. The official salons are absolutely without influence; the other salons—the salons of what is called le vrai monde, have never been more select and exclusive than at the present day; the various delegates of elegance whom we have seen meeting in the salon of the dressmaker never meet in private life; on the other hand, the theaters are no longer favorable places for the display of toilets, the more so as even in the orchestra stalls of the opera house a dresscoat is not absolutely obligatory. Nevertheless, the new fashions spread with greater rapidity than ever; and even remote foreign countries are not more than 12 months behind Paris.—From "Along the Parisian Boulevards," by Theodore Child, in Harper's Magazine.

The "angry tree" attains a height of from 10 to 20 feet. It is found in Nevada, California and Arizona. If disturbed by contact or moved by the wind it manifests signs of irritation, ruffling its leaves like the hairs of an angry cat and emitting a sickening odor.

REMARKABLE CASE

In the Medico-Chirurgical College.

Pretty Lizzie Albert Loses All Her Senses

But Sight the Result of a Bulle Wound Received at the Hands of a Jealous Lover.

Buffalo, Nov. 12.—A rare operation was performed yesterday afternoon by Dr. Ernest Laplace before the class in surgery of the Medico-Chirurgical college. It consisted of trephining the back part of the skull near the base in search of a bullet which had entered at the front between the eyes at the junture of the nose. From the subsequent symptoms it was supposed the ball had passed along under the brain and had become encysted at the back of the skull. The wound was of a character which usually results in instant death.

On August 4 last Miss Lizzie Albert, 22 years of age, the daughter of Mrs. Maggie Albert, of Canadensis, Monroe county, Pa., was employed as a waitress at a summer hotel kept by Mrs. William Bowers, at Delaware, Warren county, N. J. Her rare physical charms won her many admirers among the young men who were idling away the heated months among the fragrant Jersey pines. Among those who paid her attention was Daniel Love, son of a New York stock broker. Becoming angry because he could not monopolize the young woman's time, Love threatened her, and was indignantly repulsed.

He thereupon purchased a revolver, and returning to the hotel sought the girl. She was engaged cleaning a tray of silver knives and forks. He went up to her and said: "Lizzie, for the last time I ask you to go out with me to-night." She refused. Exclaiming "If I can't no one else shall!" he placed the revolver close to her forehead and fired. Then he rushed from the house and escaped.

Strange Symptoms Develop.

Dr. S. Herbert Vorhees was called in and probed for the ball, but without success. For two weeks Lizzie remained unconscious, hovering between life and death. At last she was gradually nursed back to a comparatively robust condition. But strange symptoms began to develop. It was found that she was deprived of all her former senses, except that of sight. When given any article of food her invariable comment was: "I see it." A tuning fork held to her ear elicited the same reply. If touched on the back she could not feel but saw the person touching her, or rather, would say, "I see some one there." She appeared to be able to see all around her, although her impression of the really unseen thing might be false.

She has constantly complained of pain in the back of her head, and the operation performed yesterday was with the hope of finding the bullet.

The Operation Unsuccessful.

After trephining a hole of the usual size Dr. Laplace enlarged the aperture to nearly one and one-half inches, and with an instrument devised by himself for this occasion explored between the brain and skull all around the opening for a distance of three inches, but failed to find any trace of the missile. He said the conditions as they had presented themselves did not warrant his cutting into the brain structure, and he did not think the operation would result in any change in the girl's peculiar condition.

At some future time the front of the skull will be opened, and the ball again searched for. The explanation the medical men give of Lizzie's losing all of her five senses except that of sight, is that the ball in its passage cut the nerves which convey all other sensations.

DUEL ON A TIGHT ROPE.

A Desperate Encounter With Surprising Results.

In Dublin, at the beginning of this century, there were two rivals in the art of rope dancing—a Frenchman named Perote and an Italian, Signor Sarfuico—who, after trying in every way to outvie each other, agreed to perform together in a "dance of friendship." The two men on the rope were in full dress of the period, with lace ruffles, bagwigs and swords. Signor Sarfuico, in beginning, seemed to have some difficulty with his feet, which, Perote perceiving, caused him to make some remark which aroused the Italian's anger, who raised his hand as if to strike. The same instant Perote's rapier was drawn and before the audience could comprehend that they had quarreled Sarfuico's sword was out also and the two were thrusting at each other on the tight rope. Both were good swordsmen, but Tid-Bits says, Perote was the better of the two. He warded off the Italian's thrusts with his rapier till Sarfuico, making one desperate lunge, received a back stroke which threw him off his balance, and at the same time he attempted to grapple with his enemy. Down he went and down went Perote, and there was the Italian hanging on to the rope by his feet and the Frenchman hanging on to it by both hands, when the latter, with a face of triumph, cried: "Look, ladies and gentlemen, at the straps attached to his shoe heels and passed over the rope! There is how he has made himself safe and dared to pretend he surpassed me, whose life was spent on the rope, and whose great-great-grandfather performed before Henry IV." By this time the spectators had rushed with ladders and feather beds and got both men safely down. Sarfuico's exposure, however, prevented his further success and he quickly disappeared from the city.

ENTERTAINING THE WRONG MAN

Lord Seaforth, who was born deaf and dumb, was, according to a writer in Cassell's Journal, to dine one day with Lord Melville.

Just before the time of the company's arrival Lady Melville sent into the drawing room a lady of her acquaintance, who could talk with her fingers to dumb people, that she might receive Lord Seaforth.

Presently Lord Guildford entered the room, and the lady taking him for Lord Seaforth, began to ply her fingers very nimbly; Lord Guildford did the same, and they had been carrying on a conversation in this manner for about 10 minutes when Lady Melville joined them.

Her female friend said:

"Well, I have been talking away to this dumb man."

"Dumb!" cried Lord Guildford; "bless me, I thought you were dumb!"

A railroad with a gauge of but 24 inches is now building in North Carolina. It is to run from Hot Springs, near the Tennessee border, to Laurel river, a distance of 24 miles. Its course is through a very mountainous country, touching also a fine farming section. The main purpose of its construction is to get out the timber on about 70,000 acres of land. A type of mogul engine is being built for the little road. There is a railroad of the same gauge now being operated in Maine and one or two in the western states.

PEOPLE WHO EAT CLAY.

Widely Separated Places Where Earth Is An Article of Diet.

Clay-eating, perhaps, was unknown prior to the discovery of the Americas, the first known allusion to that curious article of diet being found in the journal of Sir Samuel Argole, in that part devoted to his travels in the "Land of Virginia," in the year 1613.

"In this journey," he says, "I likewise found a mine of a strange kind of earth, the virtues of which I know not, but the natives use it for physic, and allege that it cures pain in the stomach and a variety of sicknesses."

Even at the present time the poorer classes of whites in North and South Carolina are said to eat clay to such an extent as to give their complexion a peculiar greenish hue.

Humboldt, during his explorations of the Rio Negro, South America, discovered a tribe of Indians "whose principal food during the rainy season was a fat, unctuous clay called 'bole.'"

There are several Central American tribes that greedily devour the earth of ant hills, and the same may be said of the negroes of Sierra Leone.

In Germany, during the time of the last famine, an infusorial earth called "mountain meal" was largely used, either with or without a mixture of heat flour.

A SOCIETY GIRL

Convicted of Grand Larceny,

And Is Sentenced to Pay a Fine.

Her Accusers Are Stern Bros., New York—She Must Pay $100.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 12.—A decision confirming the conviction and sentence of Miss Lucy Gardner was handed down yesterday by the supreme court at Trenton. Gardner was a society girl, living with her mother, in South Arlington avenue, East Orange. The family claim to be related to the "Gardiners of Gardiner's Island," but this claim has been disputed. The young woman went to Stern Bros., in New York, a year ago, and ordered a number of small articles sent to her home in East Orange. A package was sent to the Gardners, which was taken in by some members of the family, but a couple of days later Miss Gardner informed Stern Bros. that the goods delivered to her had not been those which she had ordered and paid for.

The merchants, unable to disprove the statement, duplicated the order. These articles were received and nothing more was heard of the matter. Goods from the Sterns are delivered in the Oranges by one of the firm's own wagons, stationed in New Jersey, so, when another package arrived for Miss Gardner, some months later, the driver of the wagon opened the package in the presence of an assistant and checked the contents by the bill. Upon arriving at the Gardner house, the driver sent the boy in with the box. The boy was kept waiting a few minutes in the hall, while a servant took the goods to Miss Gardner's room, and was then summoned upstairs. He saw Miss Gardner, who told him that the articles in the box were not such as she had ordered. The result of this was that Miss Gardner was arrested and taken to the East Orange police station, where bail was taken and she held for the grand jury.

Her trial took place in the court house in Newark and lasted several days. In the interim between the girl's arrest and trial her case was taken up by the clergyman and congregation of Christ church, the fashionable house of worship in East Orange, of which she was a member. Throughout the trial Miss Gardner was surrounded by friends in the congregation, and the pastor sat by her lawyer. The trial resulted in the girl's conviction of larceny, and Judge Kirkpatrick ordered her to pay a fine of $100 and the costs of the court.

Miss Gardner's counsel, who is one of the most eminent members of the New York and New Jersey bar, appealed the case, not because of the severity of the sentence, but to clear his client's character of the stigma put upon it by the jury. After a patient hearing, however, the supreme court has decided that the case was not mistried and has confirmed the finding and sentence of the lower court. But one resource is now left to Miss Gardner and her lawyers, and that is to appeal from the decision of the supreme court to the court of errors and appeals.

A DEADLY POISON.

Threads From the Bamboo Cause a Terrible Death.

The bamboo, the reeds of which are useful in so many ways, is used by the Japanese as a means with which they wreak bitter vengeance on offenders and enemies, for it contains a poison of a terribly destructive nature, which causes a slow and painful death, and is all the more pernicious, as it can be administered in a manner that defies detection.

The powerful poison is found close to the knots of the bamboo reed in the form of sharp, black, fibrous threads which can be easily removed with a knife, a piece of glass, or any other cutting instrument. Mixed with water or food, they are absorbed without being noticed, and they settle at once in the throat or other air passages, which they commence to obstruct, producing a wretched cough and inflammation which ends in tuberculosis and other mortal diseases of the lung and throat, with ultimate death. Proofs of this were obtained in experimenting with a dog. The symptoms were as follows: Loss of appetite, increasing thirst, cough and expectoration, loss of flesh, protruding eyes, manifest anxiety and oppression, with death following in a short time.

A WIFE'S LITTLE TRICK.

Do you know how to take your time in dressing when you are going out with your husband without having him bite the head off you every few minutes as he inquires if it is going to take you all night, or all day, as the case may be, to get ready? Here is one little wife's trick:

"Having stood this thing as long as it was possible," she said. "I determined to give John something to keep him employed while I dressed. So every time he asks me when I'll be ready, I answer with confidence, 'Just as soon as you.' Then I slip off and hide his hat, cane, or gloves, and while he hunts the missing articles in silence, not daring to ask me their whereabouts after his repeated insinuations on 'woman carelessness,' I take my time in dressing without fear of a lecture."

Nearly three-fourths of all the cases of cholera in southern Russia, or in the region between the Caspian sea and the Black, have proved fatal. In St. Petersburg, where better sanitary conditions exist, over half the cases have proved fatal. In Hamburg the ratio of deaths in cholera cases has been nearly one-half while in northern Germany, in Belgium and in France it has been about one-third. About 80 per cent. of the cases in Persia are thought to have proved fatal. A quarter of a million Persians are supposed to have perished by the Asiatic cholera this year.

A CHILD WIFE

Sues Her Father-in-Law for $25,000 Damages.

She Says Her Husband's Cruel Parents

Alienated His Affections From Her—Poverty Her Only Crime.

Denver, Nov. 12.—Pretty Nellie G. Joslin has brought suit against her father-in-law, Jervis Joslin, the jeweler, for $25,000 on a charge of alienating the affections of her husband, Ralph Joslin.

Mrs. Ralph Joslin is a handsome young woman of apparently about 19 years of age. Her maiden name was Carrol, and her story, of the alleged injustices are quite touching.

She was married to Ralph Joslin about five months ago by Father Ryan, of St. Leo's church, but at no time, according to her story, have they kept house or lived together, Mrs. Joslin remaining at home with her mother and Ralph continuing to live with his parents.

Mrs. Nellie Joslin stated that the reason she did not live with Ralph after the marrige was that his parents objected to her because of her poverty; but that he kept promising her they would go to Aspen to live as soon as he could collect some money he claimed his father owed him.

She says they were always happy in each other's company and that their only source of annoyance was his parents' objection to their marriage. She further claims that Ralph's parents forbade him coming to see her, but that he continued to come until the evening before he left the city, which was about two months ago.

The evening before he left she says he called and told her to get everything in readiness for their journey to Aspen, and that he would come to her mother's house the next day and together they would leave for happier scenes.

This meeting with her husband was her last one, and after waiting for several days without seeing him she went to his parents, who refused to pay any attention to her.

She claims to have made repeated demands on the senior Joslins for the return of her husband, but they have turned a deaf ear to her every plea. She asserts that they would not even inform her where her husband was staying, and that she has never received a word from him since he left her, two months ago. For the affections of her husband and the loss of his companionship and support she asks the sum of $25,000.

Mrs. Joslin is in a delicate condition and says that she has always remained true to her marriage vows and that the only obstacle in the way of her living happily with her husband, Ralph Joslin, is the interposition of his parents, whose only objection to her is her poverty; and through her attorney, C. C. Brown, she brings the above suit, naming Jervis Joslin and his wife as co-defendants.

Mr. Joslin was asked as to the status of affairs, but claimed to know nothing about the matter other than that his son was married to some woman. He stated that he knew nothing whatever about her, and that he did not even know her maiden name. He says Ralph was not of age at the time of his marriage, and that he is now under the age of 21 years.

It is learned, from other sources, that young Joslin is in Kansas City in the employ of the Jocard Jewelry company, and it is claimed that his father secured this position for him in order to get him away from his young and handsome wife.

Young Joslin, when he went to secure his marriage license, swore that he was 22 years of age.

HOME-MADE WILD MEN.

How Their Manufacture Is Practiced in China.

There are many curious trades in the world, says the New York Press, but the most strange must surely be the "artificial manufacture of wild men." Yet a well-known English doctor in China has just certified from his own personal experience that this art is regularly practiced in the flowery kingdom.

First a youth is kidnapped, then bit by bit he is flayed alive, and the skin of a dog or a bear is grafted piece by piece upon him. His vocal chords are next destroyed by the action of charcoal to make him dumb, and the double purpose of causing "etiolation" of the skin and utter degradation of the mental faculties affected by keeping him immured in a perfectly black hole for a number of years. In fact by treating him like a brute for a sufficiently long time he is made into one. At last he is exhibited to the entirely credulous Chinese as a wild man of the woods and his possessors reap a rich harvest. The priests, it seems, are adepts at the art. When a kidnapper, however, is caught by the people he is torn to pieces, and when the authorities get him they torture him and promptly behead him.

HOUSEHOLD TRASH.

"I'm glad we're going to move," remarked Mrs. Higbee to her husband the other morning as they began packing up their household goods. "We've been living in this house so many years that we have accumulated stacks upon stacks of trash I shall be glad to leave behind us."

"That's so," said Mr. Higbee. "We've got oceans of old clothes and furniture and stuff that is no more use to us than a balloon would be. Let's give a lot of furniture and books and old dishes and worn clothing to our scrub woman. They'll come in very handy for her and her family this winter, and besides it is no more than right that we should do something for the poor, whom we have always with us," and Mr. Higbee's bosom swelled with the proud consciousness of a man who assures himelf that his heart is large and warm and is in the right place. "There's the old hair-cloth sofa and those old-style chairs—we don't want those, do we?" he continued.

"To be sure we do," replied Mrs. Higbee. "I shall cover the sofa with some new cloth and paint the chairs white and they'll be real nice. By the by, you'll never wear that gray suit of yours any more, will you?"

"I certainly shall if I get half a chance," responded Mr. Higbee. "A tailor can clean and press it and make it about as good as new."

Later on, as Mrs. Higbee was sorting over her old dresses, she remarked half aloud: "This gray I'll have colored a terra cotta, and this blue can be made over for a school dress for our Maude, and this black—well, it's pretty good yet and—"

And Mr. Higbee decided that his oldest suit would be good to wear on fishing trips next summer, and the next oldest would be good to wear about home when there were chores to be done, and when the whole household appurtenances had been carefully gone over and the packing of goods was completed there remained for the scrub woman a pair of superannuated suspenders and a broken teacup. These articles Mr. Higbee carefully put aside for her, remarking as he did so: "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver. He who giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord."

If you care to learn the worth of household trash just you attempt to divorce yourself from it.

IN THE HOME OF ROMANCE.

Princess Zuleika, the Favorite Daughter of Osman Pasha.

The Princess Zuleika, the favorite daughter of Osman Pasha, the heroic defender of Plevna, is the only woman of the Turkish race who is known to possess the poetical talent, though no doubt it is dormant in many voiceless myriads who are hidden behind the curtains of the harem. The princess is young, handsome, attractive, with large, languishing eyes of the orient and the fair skin of her European mother. It is not wonderful that she is a poetess, for she lives in the very home of romance; in a marble palace built in the mysterious circuit of Constantinople, and commanding a splendid view of the miraculous panorama of the Golden Horn, and the spot where Europe stretches out an iron hand to Asia across the most wonderful rapids in the world. Gold is the very meanest thing that is served to her. At her bidding slaves fly to execute her slightest word. And she knows that in her veins flows the blood of the Ghazi—the bravest of the brave.

LOVE AND LARCENY.

A Gay Lathario Gets Into Jersey Jail.

His Fickle Affections Play Fast and Loose With the Hearts of Trusting Maids.

Hammonton, N. J., Nov. 8.—Wesley West, who is connected with a pretty little romance in which two Hammonton girls figure, and who is supposedly a wealthy young resident of Idaho, is in the county jail on a charge of larceny, awaiting the arrival of an Idaho sheriff. West says that it is a case of blackmail, as he merely allowed a promissory note for $300 to go to protest. Idaho authorities telegraphed that West had previously fled to Canada, and asked the local authorities to examine his money belt, which they did, finding $320 in gold pieces and $339.25 in small bills and silver. Hammonton's interest in West lies in the fact that he courted by correspondence Miss Lottie Henshaw, a very pretty girl, who worked in the shoe factory here two years ago, becoming acquainted with her through a matrimonial agency. West then lived at Moscow, Idaho, and soon after he begun corresponding with Miss Henshaw he became engaged, and arrangements for the marriage ceremony were made. He sent word that he was coming.

Nearly all of the girls of the town were at the station to see Miss Lottie's charmer. The expected train came, but no Wesley. Miss Henshaw was almost heart-broken, but had hardly got home before her lover, who was reputed to be very wealthy, appeared, having arrived by another train, and all was well. The wedding day was set, and it lacked only two days before the event, when Wesley attended a party in his honor, given by the woman with whom he was boarding, at which the most eligible young women in the town were invited. This was all unknown to Miss Henshaw. Wesley paid great attention that evening to Miss Laura Gardener, and when the party broke up it was found that Wesley and Miss Gardener were missing. They were, however, only taking a moonlight and most romantic row on the lake. Wesley left for Philadelphia the next day and Miss Henshaw soon learned of her lover's fickleness. Nothing was seen of Wesley in Hammonton thereafter, and nothing was known of his movements until early in the fall came the announcement of his marriage to Miss Gardener at Batavia, N. Y. Soon after the couple had gone west Mrs. West returned to Hammonton, where she has been ever since awaiting her husband, who, she declared, intended selling his property. Hammonton saw nothing of West, however, until he turned up yesterday, which event was followed by his arrest.

LATTER DAY SMUGGLING.

A New Field Now Occupied Largely by Enterprising Women.

The poetry of smuggling is gone. In past days "the trim built, rakish black schooner, low lying against the evening sky," as the books have it, might have slipped into the Shrewsbury river or through Helligate with cargoes of spices, silk, et cetera, but those old days are now a tale of winter firesides. Steam has made rakish crafts useless for such purposes, while Uncle Sam's revenue service, both afloat and ashore, is well organized and has reached so high a state of efficiency that the sinner against customs laws finds little refuge outside of undervaluations or the evasions of duty on personal effects. As has apparently been recently evidenced, trim built maidens, wearing tailor made gowns, have taken the place of the rakish schooners.

The treasury agents abroad keep a sharp lookout for smugglers, and narrowly scan the passenger lists of steamships, tracing purchasers from America from point to point, and frequently cabling to this country to warn the inspectors of prospective arrivals. The seizures in the custom house at this port from October, 1891, to October, 1892, numbered 2,958, appraised at $236,397.36— an insignificant amount when compared with the vast aggregate of importations. Of this number of seizures 198 were of dutiable articles in passengers' baggage, and only 174 for actual smuggling.

The smuggler of to-day is generally a woman. Her opportunities, scant as they are, are better than any men can find, and she is generally shrewder. The false bottom trunk is falling into disuse, along with the decline of the chignon and the disappearance of the bustle, and now she brings her goods as personal effects, which under the elastic construction of the law in the Astor decision permits many things that were formerly thought to be forbidden. Fine laces and ribbons are brought in as trimming to calico gowns; dresses lined with costly silks. Valuable diamonds are bedded in cakes of soap, set into cheap jewerly or ordinary garter buckles, and costly jewelry is worn when leaving the steamer. Other articles are brought in as works of art or tools of trade, and one man who some time ago stepped off the vessel with a trifling malacca stick was invited to step to the seizure room while the inside of the stick was appraised. Within it were unset jewels of great value.

Some of these smugglers follow that pursuit as agents for American dealers, some to procure cheaply articles of value for personal use, some to bring presents for friends, and some from an innate desire to do what the law forbids. Smuggling, however, in amounts large enough to be really profitable, when the risk is considered, has become almost impossible to-day, unless over uninhabited portions of the Canadian border. The dealers abroad cannot afford to permit the cutting of their prices on this side, where many of them have selling agencies, and they frequently notify the treasury offices in Europe of sales to Americans. With them in league against him the smuggler's lot is not a happy one and his golden age has gone.—New York Press.

PROFESSOR FOSTER.

What Kind of Weather Is in Store

For the People of These United States.

Scientific Talk on Comets and Some of the General Beliefs.

Copyrighted 1892, by W. T. Foster.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 12.—My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm waves to cross the continent from 10th to 14th and from 16th to 20th. The next will reach the Pacific coast about 21st, cross the western mountains by the close of the 22d, the great central valleys from 23d to 25th, and the eastern states about the 26th. This disturbance will bring an increase of rainfall, cloudy, foggy weather, and a cool wave of considerable severity.

The cool wave will cross the western mountains about the 24th, the great central valleys about the 26th, and the eastern states about the 28th. This cool wave will bring heavy frosts, reaching far down into the cotton belts. Snows may be expected in the northern states on the front of this cool wave as it moves eastward.

Legends of the Comet.

Hesiod was one of the earliest of Greek poets and wrote about 900 years before Christ, or about 2,800 years ago. He tells that Earth united with Night to do terrible deeds. The earth made a large white iron sickle, having jagged teeth, and having given it to Cronus, stationed him in ambush and as Heaven came by Cronus grasped at him with his huge sickle, cruelly wounding him.

Hesiod, like Job, is one the most remarkable pieces of literature extant; and I give the following extract from his writings to show that the legends of a great catastrophe were fresh in the memory of the human race 2,800 years ago. The great comet was close to the earth, revolving around it in a few hours, and the monster, called Typhon, is thus described by Hesiod: "A fierce dragon flying with dusky tongues, and from the eyes in his wondrous heads fire sparkled from beneath the brows, while from all his heads fire was gleaming as he looked keenly. In all his terrible heads were voices sending forth every kind of noise ineffable. For one while indeed they would utter sounds so as for the gods to understand, and at another time the voice of a loud bellowing bull, untamable in force and proud in utterance; at another time that of a lion possessing a daring spirit; at another time like to whelps wonderous to hear, and at another he would hiss, and the lofty mountains resounded."

"Then would there have been done a deed past remedy, and he would have reigned over mortals, and immortals had not the sire of gods and men quickly observed him. Harshly he thundered, and heavily and terribly the earth re-echoed around and the broad heaven above and the sea and streams of ocean and the abyss of earth. But beneath his immortal feet vast Olympus trembled as the king uprose and earth groaned beneath. The heat from both caught the dark-colored sea, both of the thunder and lightning, and fire from the monster, the heat arising from the thunder storms, winds, and burning lightning."

"All earth and heaven and sea were boiling; huge billows waved around the shores, and beneath the violence of the gods an unalloyed quaking arose."

"Pluto, monarch over the dead beneath, trembled, the Titans under Tartarus, standing about Cronus trembled also on account of the unceasing tumult and dreadful contention. But Jove, when in truth he had raised high his wrath and had taken his arms, his thunder and lightning and smoking belt, leaped up and smote him from Olympus and scorched all around the wondrous heads of the monster."

"But when at length he had quelled it, after having smitten it with blows, the monster fell down, lamed, and hugs earth groaned. But the flame from the lightning-blasted monster flashed forth in the mountain hollows, hidden and rugged, when he was stricken and much was the vast earth burnt and melted by the boundless vapor, as pewter melts in the sacred earth beneath the hands of Vulcan. So was earth melted in the glare of burning fire and then he curled him into the wide Tartarus."

Coming across the ocean we find among the Toltecs of Central America ancient end very similar legends. These legends relate that there fell a rain of fire that burned up everything; also a rain of gavel; that the sandstone we now see scattered about and basaltic rocks boiled with tumult and the sun was on fire. The comet, of course, made it appear that the sun was on fire when in fact it was only the effect of the comet on the earth's atmosphere.

The Algonquins of North America tell of a great battle between good and evil, or the sun and the comet, in which they say: "The sun's foe was the glittering prince of serpents." This is a good description of the comet.

The Tupi Indians of Brazil have this legend: "Seeing the ingratitude of men and their contempt for him who had made them thus joyous, God withdrew from among them and sent upon them a divine fire which burned all that was on the surface of the earth. By the sweep of this fire mountains were raised and valleys were dug. Of all men one alone, Iria Mage, was saved and was carried into heaven. Seeing all things thus destroyed he spoke thus to God: 'Wilt thou also destroy the heavens and their granture? Alas! henceforth where will be our home? Why should I live since there are none other of my kind?' Then God was so filled with pity that he poured a deluging rain on the earth which quenched the fire and flowed on all sides, forming the ocean."

The earth being struck by a comet the above is a good description of what would result and it agrees with the accounts of Noah's flood in other countries.

Away in the northwest among the Indians of British Columbia is found this tradition: "In some unexpected way this earth became peopled in every part and it remained until a fierce fire of several days' duration swept over it, destroying all life with two exceptions; one man and one woman hid themselves in a deep cave in the heart of a mountain and from these two has the world since be repeopled." This sounds very much like Lot and his two daughters who dwelt in a cave in the mountains and became the ancestors of the Moabites and the Ammonites, but the two places are almost on opposite sides of the globe and proves that the great conflagration was universal and such as could only be caused by a comet, revolving around the earth.

IT WAS VERY SAFE.

The Careful Man Put His Duplicate Key in the Safety Deposit Box and It Stayed There.

A man rushed into the waiting-room of a safety deposit company yesterday morning and said hurriedly to the custodian:

"I want to get something out of my box—No. 237—and I've lost my key. How will I manage it?"

"We gave you two keys, you remember, when you leased the box," returned the custodian, "so that if you lost one you could fall back on the other. They are duplicates. You will have to go and get your key. There is no other way to get at the contents of your box, sir."

"Great Scott!" gasped the excited caller. "I put the other key inside the box for safe keeping."

A small electrically operated machine is out to automatically cut and light cigars.

Woman's Rights—The Domestic Corner—Scrap Basket—Over Our Teacups.

FAINT HEART.

I love her so!
But does she know
How fondly I adore her?
Dread makes me dumb
Whene'er I come
To plead my suit before her.

Some commonplace,
Devoid of grace
Or meaning, then I utter,
I come to woo,
And stoutly sue
For love—I only stutter.

Sometimes I think,
When on the brink
Of a brave declaration,
She knows what my Fond looks imply,
And waits for my oration.

But even then
I slump again,
And eloquence deserts me,
While all the while
I see a smile
In her bright eyes that hurts me.

Oh, cruel fate!
My wretched state
Must surely waken pity.
When I would speak
My tongue grows weak,
She's so divinely pretty!

What shall I do?
Unless I woo,
Some other chap will get her—
By Jove, a bright
Idea! To-night
I'll just write her a letter!

YES OR NO?

Oh, never did lover in fable
In such a predicament stand!
A letter I wrote to my Mabel,
To ask for her heart and her hand,
With compliments worded so nicely,
A lifelong devotion I swore,
She answered—and left me precisely
As wise as before!

It is true that I begged, when inditing
My note, a reply with all speed;
And Mabel, to judge from the writing,
Fulfilled my petition, indeed!
The drift of this scrawl so erratic
I am wholly unable to guess;
It may be refusal emphatic,
Or can it be "Yes?"

"Affection" she'll feel for me "ever,"
But stay—if that blot is an "n,"
It turns it at once into "never,"
Or is it a slip of the pen?
Her heart will a "truant (or true?) be,"
And what is the word just above?
It looks like—it cannot be—"booby!"
Perhaps it is "love."

A meeting must needs be awaited
To render these mysteries plain;
Perhaps in this letter she's stated
She never will see me again;
On one thing at least I've decided:—
Should she be my partner for life,
A typewriter shall be provided
For the use of my wife!

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

A right to love one truly
And be loved back again;
A right to share his fortunes
Through sunlight and through rain;
A right to be protected
From life's most cruel blights,
By manly love and courage—
Sure these are women's rights!

The above stanza is culled from a sweet "poem"—so sweet as to be almost nauseating, but nevertheless it is going the rounds of all the papers, and its wide notice alone entitles it to mention in this club, where similar fallacies have been shown up as false reasoning, so many times, that there is really nothing more to say of them.

Of course no one denies woman's right to love truly, or be "loved back again;" neither will any hard-hearted, strong-minded individual compel her to refrain from sharing "his" fortunes through sunshine and rain.

They only want an equal share. They do not want all the drippings of the umbrella, while their legal lord walks serenely in the center of the shelter, high and dry.

And when the sun is fiercely hot they do not want all of that, either. They are perfectly willing to share, only it must be an equal share. Not too much of the good things of life on one side.

And then, after settling, to his own satisfaction, these two points, the poet dreamily runs his tapering fingers through his raven tresses, and evolves from his fertile brain, oh joy, "another line that rhymes," and springs upon a long suffering people the worn out chestnut about woman's having "a right to be protected from life's most cruel blight."

Even the iron nerve of a McKinley never perpetrated anything like this.

And the thousands of widows and orphans, struggling to keep the wolf from the door, by means of the needle, receiving a miserable pittance for their labor, because of their sex; the thousands of unfortunates whose only escape from starvation is through a life of shame—the multitude of poor, helpless, women give the lie to this specious argument.

Woman has no right to protection; she has no right of any kind that any one is bound to respect, and she never will have except through the ballot.

As long as human nature is, as it is, no person can expect to command protection by means of a mere mawkish sentiment.

When woman possesses the means to protect herself she will probably take steps to prevent the reading public from having inflicted upon them such silly and senseless gush, in the name of poetry.

JUST ONE SMALL WORD.

It is only a short one. But I want to say it for the girl who is downhearted. I want to say to say it to one who is unhappy; to the one who is tired; to the one who is an invalid, and to the one to whom none of the good things of life seem to come. It is this: "Hope." If you keep on hoping from day to day and from day to day, you will never be entirely unhappy, and, if with the hoping you do some helping, you will be quite happy.

I know it is hard—this life we lead; but if we keep on hoping and helping, and hoping and helping, we will come in time to that other life of which we know nothing except that there will be no more weeping, "for God will wipe away all tears." So mark the word on your heart and keep it always before you—that one little ord, Hope.—Ruth Ashmore.

We are having lovely weather, windows and doors open day and evening; oranges are fast ripening, will be fine by Christmas, while the orange groves ring with the varied notes of our own wild mocking-birds. We have a fine flower garden now, especially roses. But I must shorten my first call or you will never want to hear again from

HOW TO CLEAN FURS.

Here Are Some Hints for Those With Shabby, Last Year's Furs

Notwithstanding the old idea that really good furs will wear forever, the owner of a nice sealskin jacket, or a fine ermine cape, cannot repress a sigh of disappointment when she looks at her furs for the first time since their long summer seclusion.

"It may be true," sighs she, "that my furs will never wear out. But is is equally true that they look very shabby after lying in a camphor chest for six months. Why, some of this fur is so flattened that it actually looks as if it were moth-eaten."

If a furrier has had charge of the furs during the summer they are all right now, for a dealer has every convenience for cleaning and keeping furs. But if the home mother has taken them into her own keeping she will no doubt be glad, at this time, to learn how her treasures may be renovated and made as "good as new."

Ermine and sealskin are best cleaned with soft flannel. Rub the fur delicately against the grain, and when it has been thoroughly lifted and reversed, so to speak, dip the flannel into common flour and rub lightly any spots that look dark or dirty. Shake the fur well and rub with a clean, dry flannel until the flour is all removed.

Sable, chinchilla, squirrel and monkey skin may be very nicely cleaned with hot bran. Get a small quantity of bran meal and heat it in the oven until it is quite warm. Rub stiffly into the fur and leave for a few minutes before shaking to free it from the bran.

Mink may be cleaned and freshened with warm cornmeal, and, like the other short-haired furs, may be done without removing the lining.

Those who may not care to go to the trouble of taking fur garments apart will find that the simple remedies described will go a long way towards making the jackets and capes look clean, even if not ripped apart.

DON'TS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

Don't waste the cold mutton. A fine dish can be presented for the domestic table when cooked with macaroni and potatoes.

Don't fail in your selection of good beef. The sirloin is the choicest of cuts, while rib roasts have the next place. Three ribs will suffice for a family dinner. Beef is best in winter, although always in season.

Don't eat veal all months in the year. The proper time is from April to September. The leg is the most profitable, and being solid meat, can be cut up into cutlets. Veal requires long cooking. As a rule it is indigestible, and for stomachs of weak tendencies it should be indulged in sparingly. The chops, when breaded, are excellent, but all veal should be well done.

Don't cook it too much; if done rightly, the juice should follow the knife when carving. Beef can be served in various ways, and for the rib roast, the Yorkshire pudding to accompany it. Sirloin steaks are the most nutritious, but the porterhouse takes the best and highest place. The trimmings of all beef should find their way to the steak pot, and by the aid of vegetables a good soup can be realized. The cold meat which is left can be served with French stews, ragouts and small dishes for the first meal of the day. In all well regulated families beef is the promoter of good health, good digestion, and with them the forerunner of good dispositions.

Don't serve your mutton unless of the best. It should hang for a week before it is eatable. The flesh should be firm and of a bright red. The fat, creamy and yellow in color. Mutton, like beef, is divided into sides and quarters. The hind quarter, which is the leg and loin, is the most desirable cut. It can be cooked in two ways, roasted or boiled, and served either way with caper sauce, which is a great acquisition. The shoulder can be roasted stuffed. The breast, when rightly treated, makes a capital Irish stew. English mutton ranks best when selected for the market, but is expensive for people of limited means.

TO RAISE THE KITCHEN STANDARD.

"I must run right down stairs while everything is fresh in my mind to tell it all to Ellen," said a housekeeper the other day, hurriedly leaving a house guest. Later she explained that she was taking a course of cooking lectures and sharing them promptly every time with her cook. "I talk them over with her, and she tries the dish the new way at once.

"I don't believe housekeepers realize it, but they get constantly many valuable hints and much domestic knowledge that is of no use till it is applied in the kitchen, where it rarely goes. It is, perhaps, a selfish policy of mine, but still the right one, I think, that my cook shall receive all such enlightenment as comes my way. It adds, of course, to her intelligent service and it adds, too, to her willingness to undertake innovations. Arbitrary, unexplained orders are distasteful to anybody. I can appreciate that to the kitchen intellect they partake of tyranny. I have a library of cook books which Ellen understands are for her—not my—benefit, and a housekeeping magazine which I take goes regularly down to her with paragraphs marked, or I call her attention to them.

"It has always seemed to me that we mistresses sit in our knowledge, asking over-much from the ignorance of our servers. I am trying in a small way to raise the standard of the kitchen."

NOVEMBER.

The sun sinks low in the crimson west,
And the purple haze of night
With gloomy shadows warns to rest
The sea gull, late in flight.
The trees, denuded, bare and dull
In the glow gaunt spectres stand;
All nature feels the dreadful lull,
The dying year's glooms o'er the land.
In the life of man an hour like this
With its dread and awe will come,
Then to part forever from the bliss
Or the cares of the world; for some
More almost than they could bear;
For others, long years of ease,
But, for all November has its care,
For everyone you meet will sneeze.
—The Baron.

OVER OUR TEACUPS.

At a recent Baltimore wedding the bride and groom stood in front of a screen of foliage in which glittered electric birds and butterflies, while little sparks of electric light came and went like fireflies. Rice and what seemed to be snowflakes were scattered by an electric fan. When the guests entered the dining room electricity rang bells and played music boxes and at the end of the first course the same agency flashed out the words "Good Luck" over the heads of the bride and groom, and what had been given to the bride as an ornamental hairpin proved to be also an electrical device that flashed into light and surrounded her head with a halo.

Autograph recipe books are trifles shown at the women's exchanges. Two covers of Bristol board are tinted and painted with a bunch of flowers or some conventional design of pots and pans, and hold a dozen or more plain leaves between them. The words "autograph recipes" are done in graceful text on the first page with some appropriate verse on food or the art of dining. A pencil is attached by a ribbon, though the recipes are preferably written in ink. Provided with such a book the chatelaine coaxes a pet recipe from a score of friends whose culinary skill is accepted, and secures as well an autograph from each.

Isabella Beecher Hooker said a man told her recently that suffrage for women would mean the death of chivalry in the masculine nature. "If you vote like a man you can stand up in the horsecar like a man. I would never rise to give you my seat," said he.

"In that case," replied Mrs. Hooker "when I have a vote, so many men in the horsecar will jump to offer me a seat I shan't need yours."

Some novelties in stationery are in a riot of color. Terra cotta and turquois blue are shown, and pink embossed with wild roses. A coffee-colored sheet is lined with violet and a deep crushed strawberry opens to show pale old rose. The paper is beautiful, the tints exquisite—a writing desk may look like a flower garden—still, what is most and best bought is the cream and pearl white sort. Mourning note paper shows a reverse of black only on white or blue gray.

How often a single cup of tea or coffee is required by invalid, or watcher in the sick-room, by the weary woman in office or shop? An eastern house offers the "one-cup urn" which meets this emergency, and in so small a compass as to find place in the lunch-basket, grip-bag, or wherever needed. It is with cover and flange, the latter fitting over the cup securely. The beverage is filtered through wire-gauze directly into the cup.

WOMAN AND EDUCATION.

Queen Margaret college, which began its existence in 1877 as an association for the higher education of women, and later was incorporated as a woman's college, has become a part of the University of Glasgow. The council of the college has handed over to the university the government, the endowments, and the buildings of the college on condition that the buildings, etc., are to be reserved for the exclusive education of women and the college to become incorporated with the university as a woman's department of the same. This offer the university has accepted, under the provisions of the act of the universities' commissioners empowering the courts of the sveral universities of Scotland to admit women to graduation, and to provide for their education either in mixed classes of men and women or in separate classes.

Bryn Mawr college has a larger number of students than ever before. Two hundred students have registered, 55 in the freshman class and 15 graduate students, including three Girton students. Each year the college extends its accommodations, and still private families receive many pupils who cannot find rooms in either of the three halls.

The women students at Oxford have since '84 obtained several first-class honors in modern history. This year, for the first time, a woman has achieved the distinction of a first class in the final classical school. And at the same time a Parsee student, Sorabji's, has accomplished the more remarkable feat of taking a third class in the examinations for the B. C. L., the most difficult law examination of the university. Of 25 men with whom this woman student had to compete, two failed altogether, two obtained seconds, and not one a first.

Over 300 women are now studying at the Harvard Annex, and the freshman class of 30 members is the largest in the history of the annex.

Among the students of Iowa State university is Mrs. Stark Evans, the wife of a lawyer and the mother of five children.

DRIFTING WITH THE TIDE.

Many a wreck on the shoals we see,
As along life's voyage we glide:
They had launched on the wave without anchor or oar
And drifted along with the tide.
Living, and yet with no purpose to gain,
And trusting that others would guide,
They sought but the pleasure the present can give,
And drifted along with the tide.

Our future awaits us, for evil or good
Each one for himself must decide.
Let each firmly stand for truth and the right,
Nor drift with the wind and the tide.
And if we would anchor at last from the storm—
At last with the true and the tried—
Then steadily row for the evergreen shore,
Nor drift with the wind and the tide.
—Frances Warren.

THINGS TO BE AVOIDED.

Mauve, Nile green, rose pink, clear white, steely gray, yellowish tan and sky blue when of a sallow complexion. Plaids, broad stripes and light colors when short and stout in figure. Fluffy skirt trimming if under five feet four inches in height. Hairline stripes, plain skirts and flat vests when thin and slender in person. Turn-over collars when possessed of a long, thin neck. Collars without a finish in the way of a white cord, plaited ribbon, folds, etc., when of a dark or sallow complexion. Dirty white kid gloves on a rainy day or while traveling. Over-trimmed dresses or hats for traveling, also trains on traveling or tailor-made gowns.

WAITING FOR THE ANGELS.

Waiting through days of fever,
Waiting through nights of pain,
For the waft of wings at the portal,
For the sound of songs immortal,
And the breaking of life's long chain.

There is little to do for our dear one—
Only to watch and pray—
As the tide is outward drifting,
As the gates of heaven are lifting,
And its gleam is on her way.

The tasks that so often taxed her,
The children she held so dear,
The strain of the coming and going,
The stress of mending and sewing,
The burden of many a year,

Trouble her no longer,
She is past their fret and care.
On her brow is the angel's token,
The look of a peace unbroken,
She was never before so fair.

You see, she is waiting the angels,
And we—we are standing apart.
For us there are loss and sorrow;
For her is the endless morrow,
And the reaping-time of the heart.
—Margaret E. Sangster, in Harper's Bazar.

MOST TO BE PITIED.

The woman of sentiment asked of the doctor
(And the answer he gave her most awfully shocked her),
"Dear doctor, of all the relentless diseases
That lie in dark wait, without warning to seize us,
What malady is it so harshly attacks us,
So wickedly wounds and so ruthlessly racks us,
That, seeing its victim distressed in such fashion,
You give him at once your profoundest compassion?"
And the doctor responded, "I think 'tis admitted
The man with the smallpox is most to be pitied."
—Judge.

The man with the smallpox may be the most pitied,
I'm sure there's a disease by all 'll be admitted
To call for more sympathy, from doctors or friends.
It comes without warning, and always portends
A hard clod. You will think that's all that's the matter,
When down your spine runs a chill; your teeth all chatter;
Your head is a barrel; your mouth feel as if lined
With a buffalo robe; your eyes are nearly blind.
Your nose blankly refuses its office to serve;
Your senses are all gone; nothing left but your nerve.
This disease reminds me of a cat with a mouse,
One moment by throat you're strangled, "nix cum arous."
The next you are freed and think your trouble is o'er;
Too soon you will find you're in his clutches once more.
Oh doctor! you surely will change smallpox for grippe
When you're asked this question on your next daily trip.

I am sure there is no such a formidable foe
For doctors to encounter wherever they go,
As this slimy, sneaking, detestable disease,
That comes on so craftily with only a sneeze.
The ending! Ah, sad to relate in this ditty.
The pits all remain inward "more is the pity."

FULLY EXPLAINED.

The girl I knew as Mary Smith
Is now Marie de Smythe;
Her figure now is Junoesque,
That once was trim and lithe;
Her hair, which was a glossy black,
Is now the shade of gold,
And the western girl is English since
She went abroad, I'm told;
She was twenty when I knew her first,
And now she's just eighteen;
She's married, yet they call her "Miss,"
Whatever can it mean?
I can not understand the change,
My head is in a whirl;
They tell me it is all because
She is a chorus girl.

Almond Cake.

Take one breakfast coffeecupful of butter, cream it and mix one cup of sugar with it, four eggs, well beaten; one cup of milk; sift enough flour into it to make it the proper consistency, taking care not to make it too thick or it will be tough; one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, one-half pound of citron, cut in slices; one-half cup of blanched almonds; teaspoonful of orange flower water for flavoring. Make a soft icing by mixing confectioner's sugar with the unbeaten white of one egg. Then arrange a cupful of blanched almonds on the top of the cake so as to almost cover it.

Devilled Crabs.

Broil crab; remove from shell; chop; brown a lump of butter size of a duck's egg; add teaspoonful of flour and a pinch of celery powder, a dash of red and black pepper; let one small onion and a bit of parsley simmer in the brown butter a few moments; then add crab, with small glass of dry sherry and cup of cream; fill shell; cover with cracker crumbs and a lump of butter; brown in quick oven, and you have a dish fit for the gods.

To Stew Chicken.—Skin and cut your chicken into small pieces. Lay them in warm water for ten minutes, then dry them with a cloth, and put them in a stew pan with some milk and water, and let them boil until quite tender. Take one pint of cream, one-quarter of a pound of butter, and stir until thick. Allow to stand until cool, then add a little salt, a gill of white wine, a few mushrooms, stir all together. Take the pieces from the pan, put away what they were boiled in, clean the pan, and put in the chicken and sauce together. Keep the pan shaking about till they are quite hot, and dish them up. You may add eggs if desired.

A Good Sauce.

One tablespoonful of currant jelly, three tablespoons of butter, one tablespoon of wine, one teaspoon of vinegar, one-half teaspoon of black pepper, one-half teaspoon of mixed mustard, one-half teaspoon of salt. Let come to a boil, and pour over game, meat, etc.

Lemon Pie.

Take three eggs, one great spoonful of butter, three-quarter cup sugar, sliced lemon and grated lemon peel to make a very rich filling. Make two crusts, manipulating the dough very little, as handling toughens it.

Seven Dinners.

Some autumn dinners which give a change from the everlasting steak and chop and roast are from an old cook-book as follows:

1. Fresh pork, sweet potato roast, lima beans, bread pudding.
2. Rabbit soup, boiled ham, cauliflower, tomatoes, apple pie.
3. Pigeon soup, beefsteak, onions, potatoes, beans, Indian fritters.
4. Oxtail soup, veal cutlets, turnips, tomatoes, dried peach pudding.
5. Pigeon pie, smoked tongue, winter squash, turnips, apple-rice pudding.
6. Stewed heart, cold ham, cabbage, potatoes, pumpkin pie.
7. Roast fowl and oyster sauce, turnips, beets, roast potato, cranberry pie, preserved quince.

Jellies.

Many thoroughly good housekeepers do not know that a most excellent and desirable jelly can be made from the most ordinary grades of sour apples. There are always late trees, those on which one might fancy that the apples would never ripen, and these are best utilized in this way.

Cut the apples up, removing all discolored spots and, if time permits and the jelly is desired to be exceptionally clear and fine, pare the fruit. Put it in a preserving kettle, covering completely with water, and let it boil until soft. Then put it in a cheese-cloth bag to drain. This should be pressed but very little, else the jelly will not be so clear.

To a pint of juice add three-quarters of a pound of sugar. Put again over the fire and boil from 15 to 20 minutes.

It is out of the question to lay down any iron-clad rules for making jelly. It is, even with the most experienced cooks, to some extent, a matter of experiment, and in which it is not at all safe to count. The quality and condition of the fruit have very much to do with the time required for boiling; therefore a little judgment is absolutely necessary.

The most beautiful, clear and delicious jelly may be made of what the fruit-grower would consider very unpromising apples, and the wise housekeeper is the one who best understands how to utilize that which might otherwise be wasted.

The flavor of the wild grape is preferred by many for this jelly. Just as the grapes begin to turn, gather, stem and cook tender, adding very little water. Strain through a jelly bag and add a pound (some use 1 1-4 pounds) of hot sugar to each pint of strained juice. Boil until it stiffens. Then take up in tumblers or jars.

Wedding Bouquets.

An English fashion for wedding bouquets is what they call the "spray bouquet." It is of enormous size and is made to be suspended from the waist at the side, leaving the bride's hands free for the prayer book, which an English bride invariably carries. The effect of the beautifully groped flat arrangement of flowers is very charming against the rich white satin or brocade of the bride's dress, and the decorative effect is still further heightened by long loops of white satin ribbon which mingle with the flowers and maiden's hair fern and hang in a graceful cascade down the entire length of the skirt.

A Letter From a Texas Friend and a Collection of Short Stories and Puzzles.

A BIT OF ADVICE.

There are some boys and girls
Who have a bad way
Of putting off work
That they should do to-day.
"Let it go till to-morrow!"
They carelessly say;
Or "'Twill do by-and-by
When we've finished our play!"
But, O boys and O girls!
And, O girls and O boys!
As sure as young folks
Make a great deal of noise,
"Let it go till to-morrow!"
And you'll learn, to your sorrow,
'Tis ten chances to one
If it ever gets done;
And "by-and-by" leads,
In spite of endeavor
To turn from the track,
Almost always, to never.

Do at once what you can,
What your hands find to do,
Is the bit of advice
That I give to you;
Then, with hearts light and free
You can pleasure pursue,
And the sun will seem brighter,
The heavens more blue;
For, O girls and O boys!
And, O boys and O girls!
As sure as from oysters
Come beautiful pearls,
"Let it go till to-morrow!"
And you'll learn, to your sorrow,
'Tis ten chances to one
If it ever gets done;
And "by-and-by" leads,
In spite of endeavor
To turn from the track,
Almost always, to never.

THE BIRD'S RECEPTION.

As Related by One of the Companie.

Mr. and Mrs. Bird had just returned from their wedding journey to the far south, and were cosily settled in their new home, a freshly-made nest in the branches of the big elm.

Father and Mother Wren had invited all the old settlers and all of the newcomers, to a reception in honor of the bridal couple.

No one was slighted in the world of culture and song to which the Wrens belonged. 'Twas remarked by all the guests that there hadn't been a finer looking pair mated that May.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wren was in the West End, the most aristocratic quarter of the park, a very commodious, airy dwelling, stylishly called the Maples, a quiet, restful green bower, shaded and protected from the too warm rays of the sun and the curious gaze of strangers.

The company began to arrive at daybreak, for you must know that birds rise at dawn, and mate early in the spring.

Promptly at 5 o'clock the lively notes of a gay wedding march were beautifully and impressively rendered by a full chorus of thirty robins, who perched in great dignity on the convenient branches of a mighty oak.

The bright young bride was lovely in rich dark colors, her feathers daintily ruffled and freshened by a morning ablution.

She received graciously, standing by the side of her spouse, Mr. Tommy Bird, a gallant and handsome young Wren.

The companions of the youthful bride assisted in the refreshment room, which was decorated lavishly by the hand of nature.

The dainty tidbits which adorned the tables were rare morsels procured with much care by those energetic English people, the sparrows, quite distinguished, you know; who were earnestly solicited, in fact, begged to come over, and then treated so shamefully.

Only jealousy, too, because by their thrift they were becoming right well-to-do when a cruel order was sent out: "Ten cents for every sparrow killed," and boys, queer kind of creatures, who walked on two legs, and carried a deadly thing called a rifle, which caused a painful death to many an innocent sparrow, filled the order.

"Good for them," tartly chirped some lazy neighbors.

"Such greedy, stingy birds, I never saw the like; full many a crumb has been snatched from us."

Well, the sparrows were the busy birds this May-day, looking after the comfort of the invited.

The venerable Robin Red-Breast was present to offer his best wishes, accompanied by his black-eyed wife and four charming daughters, whose exquisite toilettes, dashed with scarlet vest fronts, were admired by all the beaux.

Mr. Whip-poor-will and Bob White, as he is familiarly called, were invited through politeness merely, as they were considered such bores; one from his perpetual whistling, which was well enough once in a while, though a trifle melancholy, and the other, who was so conceited he couldn't do anything but mention his own name, "Bob White, Bob White," till everybody got tired. The Nightingales, a quiet, sober family, haughty, too; 'twas seldom they graced society. As it was, they came late, fashionably so, and were quickly surrounded by crowds of admirers, who prevailed upon them to give a few airs which brought tears of delight to the eyes of many, so deliciously sweet and melodious were their tunes.

The blue-birds and black-birds, demure folks; the cat-birds, rather ordinary, common place, but inoffensive beings; the humming-birds, fairy things; the canaries, very exclusive, pretty yellow butterflies, some looked contemptuously on them as being too careful of themselves, as so few lived in the open air, but confined their flight to golden cages; the mocking-birds, such gossips, repeating the simplest songs, and singing them out to the public.

Indeed, on account of this dangerous habit their friends refrained from visiting them.

The swallows on their homeward flight were induced to stay a short time. It would take too long a list to go over all the names of the residents of the park. When every one was feeling right good and peaceful, while the orchestra was softly playing "Robin, I Love Thee," out of compliment to the bride, while all the young birds were dancing and chattering in high glee, suddenly into the drawing-room from the banquet hall flew two excited birds.

"I didn't," said one.

"You did,' chirped the other.

"You took it away from me," wrathfully replied the first one.

"You are a greedy thing and I'll have nothing to do with sparrows," was the answer, and Jennie Wren, a cousin of the bride, took her sharp little claws and dug them deep into the puckered-up face of the enraged Merrie Sparrow, and at it they went until separated by the horrified company, who could scarcely pacify the naughty birds, who clawed at one another with such ferocity that, losing their balance, both fell with a sudden swift plunge down through the rustling leaves of the swaying branches into the sparkling waters of the lake.

The birds all flew to the spot, mournfully wailing: "They are drowned, they are drowned!" but luckily a small boat lay idly on the water, and into this the helpless ones had fallen, probably preventing the merry wedding guests from assisting at the funeral of two members of the feast.

Tenderly the parents of the quarrelsome young folks lifted them from their perilous situation, in dignified silence taking them home, where, after dressing their wounds and tying up their injured limbs, they were left alone, with plenty of time to think over their bad conduct.

All the birds were much shocked at such rudeness among well-bred people.

"Very bad taste," remarked one.

"Wouldn't have believed it," flippantly said the mocking-bird.

And the whole trouble arose from Jennie Wren thinking Merrie Sparrow had taken too many delicacies from the table.

This was the only thing that marred the beauty of the occasion.

It was a reception long to be remembered in the bird kingdom.

After repeated good wishes and congratulations they repaired to their nests, expressing great pleasure at the entertainment and the proverbial hospitality of the Wrens.

So ended the first spring wedding, and a crowd of children keeping a holiday in the park laughed gleefully at the hundreds of birds flying about.

One little pet clapped her dimpled hands and lisped:

"I dess the birdies are having a party."

"No," said her brother, "they're holding a council." And nobody knew what it really was about but

COUSIN JACK.

Jack, the Maligner.

Who was Jack?

Well, I will tell you.

Jack's home was in a small country town—where everybody knew everybody.

He was an only child of well-to-do parents, being of a bright disposition and having a large amount of confidence in himself, exerted quite an influence among the boys and girls of the quiet village.

No matter what was going on Jack was always there and usually found a place for giving his views of affairs of whatever nature they might be.

And for a time Jack was a favorite—parents quoting his smart ways to their children who seemed less apt.

They cited him as a model to pattern after. But as time wore on Jack's popularity seemed to wane and while little was said, a suspicion seemed to attach itself to many of his sayings.

So many little friendships had been broken with stories set afloat in some peculiar manner, and some way where peace had reigned discord and unkindnesses seemed to spring up with mushroom growth—until the merry boys and girls that were wont to be so happy in their trusting and trusted friends grew to look with distrust upon each other, which proved a cloud, indeed, where sunshine had been so lovely.

At last the secret was solved and eyes began to open to the truth of all the trouble.

None had escaped the young maligner. Back of all his brightness lurked the evil tongue and whispered tales had poisoned minds unused to question. The old saying "that murder will out," proved true in Jack's case and the disgust of his former companions was so great that he was ashamed to meet them and one fine morning Jack was missing from the little town, not, however, without a firm resolve that new-made friends should never have occasion to know him as Jack the Maligner.

Speak no ill if love and friendship you would win.

AUNT MARY.

Life of Lord Tennyson.

Alfred Tennyson was the son of a minister and was born August 6, 1809, at Somerly, Lincolnshire, England, and died October 6, 1892, at Aldworth, (Haslemere).

He was partly educated at home by his father and partly at a boarding school.

When he was but 17 years old he and his brother Charles wrote a small book of "Poems by Two Brothers." In time Tennyson went to Trinity college, Cambridge. When he was 20 years old he won Chancellor's medal for the prize poem entitled "Timbuctoo," which is not to be found in his works.

In 1833 Alfred Tennyson had his first great sorrow in his life. Arthur Henry Hallam, who had been one of his college friends and who was engaged to his youngest sister, died rather suddenly at Vienna.

It was not until 1850 he wrote the beautiful poem, "In Memoriam," which was published without his name; in the same year he married Emily, the daughter of Henry Selwood, of Berkshire, England. Not long after that Tennyson was made poet laureate to Queen Victoria.

His official poems have generally marked the death or marriage of some member of the royal family.

In 1832 Tennyson wrote the poems "The Palace of Art," "A Shallot," "The May Queen," "Lady Clara Vere de Vere," and in 1842 he wrote "Dora," "The Gardener's Daughter," Locksley Hall;" in 1864 he wrote "Enoch Arden." "The Window, or the Songs of the Wrens," was written in 1870. "The Lover's Tale" was written in 1879. "Tiresans" was written in 1885. "Locksley Hall: Sixty Years After," was written in 1886. "Demeter" in 1889. His dramatic works, which began in 1875 with "Queen Mary" and included "Harold," "The Cup," "The Promise of Mary," and "Maid Marion," which was brought out in England and performed there and after that went to New York, was among his least successful writings.

He made his home in a quiet country house at Freshwater on the western shore of the Isle of Wight; his other house Aldworth, which he built for himself, was on the slope of Blackdown, on the Surrey and Sussex border.

In 1884 he accepted a peerage which descends to his only surviving son, Hallam Tennyson, who is 40 years of age. This son has made his home with his father.

Lord Tennyson was of a very retiring and gentle disposition. He disliked to have people follow him about. One day not long ago a man watched him for several days in his private walk; at last Tennyson saw him and said to him, "Look here, young man, if I find you hanging about my favorite and private walk any more I shall give you in charge of the policeman." Here is an anecdote showing a very lovable side of the great man gone: "A short time before his last illness, a schoolgirl at Fulwell, who had written a little poem entirely of her own composition, was prevailed upon by her mistress to forward it to Lord Tennyson. The poet wrote to the little girl the next day acknowledging the receipt of the poem; expressing satisfaction at the composition and forwarding a copy in which he had made one or two slight alterations, which, he suggested, would improve the verses and make them read more smoothly. In a postscript he advised the young writer to persevere and to pay great attention to metre."

The funeral of Lord Tennyson was on the 12th of October.

He was buried in the poet's corner at Westminster Abbey in a grave near that of Robert Browning.

He was 83 years old. Mr. White, of the United States legation, was one of the pall bearers.

BEE HIVE.

Greeting.

My Dear Children—How do you all do this week and what have you been doing?

Studying hard, I presume, for I know that you are all anxious to get along nicely.

We have a letter from our little friend Lillie Jones, who is far away from us in Texas.

We also have some new and original puzzles from Toledo boys.

The essays on Lord Alfred Tennyson have been received, and the judges have concluded that the prize shall be awarded to Edith Simmons, who lives in Toledo and who is but 12 years old.

We publish her essay in this issue of the Bee, so that you can all see how good it is.

I hope to hear from you all soon.

AUNT MAUD.

A Letter From Texas.

Dear Aunt Maud—I think the cousins have neglected you of late.

I have I know, but I am going to write now.

I will tell you all about my home. I live in Greer county, Texas, away in the country where you can hear the coyotes howl by a beautiful little creek; there is a fall of water just above our house. My sister and I have a nice time watching the sparkling water as it comes over the edge of the rock and plunges into the blue pool below. There are lots of little pebbles of all colors. We spend hours at play in the creek when the lessons are all said. I am not going to school this winter. My oldest sister is away from home going to school and we miss her so much. I enjoy the Reading Club stories and think them real nice and interesting. Now Mr. Buzzer if you will print this I won't wait so long next time.

Your little friend,
LILLIE JONES.

KISSING.

Ancient Customs and Stories of Traditions with Regard to the Art.

Dainty should be the pen, and airy the thought that touches upon this most chaotic subject, says the Detroit Free Press, for the general verdict seems to be that a kiss is "Something made of nothing, tasting very sweet;

A most delicious compound with ingredients complete."

A German writer speaks of the three kisses that are probably as old as humanity. What mother does not remember the blessed content with which she kissed her new-born child, or the toil-worn man look back with a quivering heart-beat as he thinks of the first kiss of his youthful bride; then the last kiss, pressed, perhaps, upon eyes that held the light of the world for some desolate soul—who can measure the extremes of joy and sorrow that are marked by this simple act?

In ancient times the kiss of betrothal was regarded as sacred and binding, and the old English writers make frequent mention of the nuptial kiss in the church as being an important part in the ceremony.

"The kiss thou gav'st me in church here take."

Is a line quoted from the old dramatist, Marston, and simply shows the trend of feeling at the time.

It was also quite in order for all the gentlemen present to salute the bride, and we read of them waiting at the church stile for the bride to pass out.

When Mary Queen of Scots was married to Lord Darnley it is related that "She had on her back the great mourning gown of black, with the great white mourning hood," etc. "The rings, which were three, the middle a rich diamond, were put on her finger. They kneel together and many prayers were said over them. She tarrieth out the mass and he taketh a kiss."

The Scandinavian tradition that kissing was introduced into England by Rowena, daughter of the Saxon Hengist, seems to have obtained a wide credence, it is so often quoted. The old chroniclers of the time tell how the beautiful princess, at a banquet given by the British king in honor of his allies, offered the gallant monarch a kiss, all unconscious that she was establishing a precedent to be recorded in history.

However, it is, perhaps, quite unnecessary to say anything of the origin of so ancient a custom, when we read of it in the Bible and in the literature of all times.

Who does not know the touching story of Mary Magdalene kissing the sacred feet, and David offering Absalom the kiss of peace? Among the Romans if a man kissed a woman, who was not a blood relation, it was held as binding as a betrothal. We must go back to Mother Nature for the unquestioned origin of kissing.

A Scotch poet makes one of his lovers say of a coy lassie:

"Her little pigeons kiss; but she Would never take a kiss from me."

Another poet, who seems impressed with the truth of the old proverb, "that everything brings a price," rather sadly sings:

"Just one kiss; two faces met.
But the brows were knit and the cheeks were wet;
Just one kiss—then up and away;
But its mark will last for many a day.

"Just one kiss and just one word,
Softly spoken and hardly heard;
Just one kiss and just one word,
And told the story of all the years."

So many stories are told by a kiss.

John Bunyan said he "abhored" the common practice of kissing among women, and he was moved to express himself very emphatically when he saw, as he expressed it, "good men salute those women that they have visited, and that have visited them. I have made my objections against it, and when they have answered that it was but a piece of civility, I have told them that it was not a comely sight. Some, indeed, have urged the holy kiss, but then I have asked them why they have made balks? Why they did salute the most handsome and let the ill-favored ones go?"

The story of Charlemagne's secretary kissing the emperor's daughter at midnight is apropos. It was winter, and the snow lay thick upon the ground, but the valiant maid carried him home on her back, that his footsteps might not betray him. This coming to the emperor's ears he rewarded her fidelity by giving her the secrtary for a husband.

A prettier story is the queen kissing the poet. It was Marie Stuart, who found Alain Chartier asleep one day as she was out in company with her maids. "I do not kiss the man," said she, "I kiss the soul that sings."

Voltaire was similarly rewarded by the beautiful Duchess de Villars upon the successful presentation of his play of "Merope." She kissed him in presence of the whole audience, as he stood proudly in the stage box, and was enthusiastically cheered for so graceful an act.

CLEOPATRA'S NEEDLES.

The name of "Cleopatra's Needles" is a double misnomer, for, first, they bear no resemblance to a needle, and, second, Cleopatra had nothing to do with their erection, and in all probabilities never saw them. History tells us that the unfortunate queen had been dead seven years when the two obelisks which bear her name were taken to the great capital. The story of Cleopatra's Needles is the story of the rise and fall of many mighty empires; it takes us back to the time of Joseph, Moses and the Bible Pharaohs, and then follows the winding thread of time down the ages for more than 3,400 years. It was in the time of the reign of Thothmes III.—1,500 years B. C.—that these two gigantic columns of hard granite were hewn from the solid strata of the bluff at Syene, in Southern Egypt. First they were transported down the Nile for a distance of 500 miles and set up in ancient Heliopolis, "The City of the Sun." After standing as grim sentinels before that marvelous piece of architectural splendor, the "Temple of the Sun," for a full 1,500 years, they were taken down and removed to Alexandria. This time they were stationed in front of "Caesar's Temple," and stood for almost a full 2,000 years in one position before they were again molested. At the time they were placed before Caesar's Temple a bronze tablet was cast in commemoration of what was really a triumph of engineering and architectural skill. This tablet, after a lapse of 2,000 years, was found at the base of one of the obelisks. It bore this inscription in both Greek and Latin:

"In the eighth year of Augustus Caesar, Barbarus, Perfect of Egypt, caused these obelisks to be placed here, Pontius being architect."

Again, within the last score of years, they have been disturbed for a third time, and at last seperated, one being taken to London and the other brought to this side of the Atlantic and set up in Central Park, New York city.

THE SARATOGA MIRACLE

FURTHER INVESTIGATED BY AN EXPRESS REPORTER.

The Facts Already Stated Fully Confirmed—Interviews With Leading Physicians Who Treated Quant—The Most Marvelous Case in the History of Medical Science.

A few weeks ago an article appeared in this paper, copied from the Albany, N. Y., Journal, giving the particulars of one of the most remarkable cures of the nineteenth century. The article was under the heading "A Saratoga Co. Miracle," and excited such widespread comment that another Albany paper—the Express—detailed a reporter to make a thorough investigation of the statements appearing in the Journal's article. The facts as elicited by the Express reporter are given in the following article, which appeared in that paper on April 16, and makes one of the most interesting stories ever related:

A few weeks ago there was published in the Albany Evening Journal the story of a most remarkable—indeed so remarkable as to well justify the term "miraculous"—cure of a severe case of locomotor ataxia, or creeping paralysis, simply by the use of Pink Pills for Pale People, and in compliance with instructions, an Express reporter has been devoting some time in a critical investigation of the real facts of the case.

The story of the wonderful cure of Charles A. Quant, of Galway, Saratoga county, N. Y., as first told in the Journal, has been copied into hundreds, if not thousands of other daily and weekly newspapers and has created such a sensation throughout the entire country that it was deemed a duty due all the people, and especially the thousands similarly afflicted, that the statements of the case as made in The Albany Journal and copied into so many other newspapers should, if true, be verified; or, if false, exposed as an imposition upon public credulity.

The result of the Express reporter's investigations authorizes him in saying that the story of Charles A. Quant's cure of locomotor ataxia by the use of Pink Pills for Pale People, a popular remedy prepared and put up by the Dr. Williams Medicine company, Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ontario, IS TRUE, and that all its statements are not only justified but verified by the fuller development of the further facts of the case.

Perhaps the readers of the Express are not all of them fully familiar with the details of this miraculous restoration to health of a man who after weeks and months of treatment by the most skilful doctors in two of the best hospitals in the state of New York—the Roosevelt hospital in New York city, and St. Peter's hospital in Albany—was dismissed from each as incurable and, because the case was deemed incurable, the man was denied admission into several others to which application was made in his behalf. The story as told by Mr. Quant himself and published in the Albany Journal, is as follows:

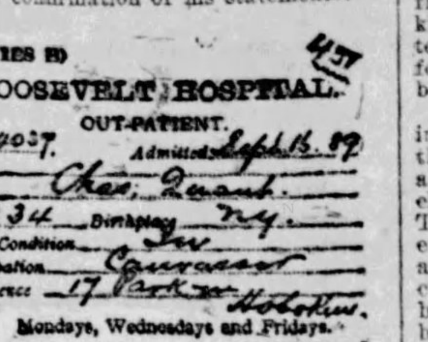
"My name is Charles A. Quant. I am 37 years old. I was born in the village of Galway, and excepting while traveling on business and a little while in Amsterdam, have spent my whole life here. Up to about eight years ago I had never been sick and was then in perfect health. I was fully six feet tall, weighed 180 pounds, and was very strong. For 12 years I was traveling salesman for a piano and organ company, and had to do, or at least did do, a great deal of heavy lifting, got my meals very irregularly, and slept in enough 'spare beds' in country houses to freeze any ordinary man to death, or at least give him the rheumatism. About eight years ago I began to feel distress in my stomach, and consulted several doctors about it. They all said it was dyspepsia, and for dyspepsia I was treated by various doctors in different places, and took all the patent medicines I could hear of that claimed to be a cure for dyspepsia. But I continued to grow gradually worse for four years. Then I began to have pains in my back and legs, and became conscious that my legs were getting weak and my step unsteady, and then I staggered when I walked. Having received no benefit from the use of patent medicines, and feeling that I was constantly growing worse, I then, upon advice, began the use of electric belts, pads, and all the many different kinds of electric appliances I could hear of, and spent hundreds of dollars for them, but they did me no good. (Here Mr. Quant showed the Journal reporter an electric suit of underwear for which he paid $124.) In the fall of 1888 the doctors advised a change of climate, so I went to Atlanta, Ga., and acted as agent for the Estey Organ company. While there I took a thorough electric treatment but it only seemed to aggravate my disease, and the only relief I could get from the sharp and distressing pains was to take morphine. The pain was so intense at times that it seemed as though I could not stand it, and I almost longed for death as the only certain relief. In September of 1888 my legs gave out entirely and my left eye was drawn to one side, so that I had double sight and was dizzy. My trouble so affected my whole nervous system that I had to give up business. Then I returned to New York and went to the Roosevelt hospital, where for four months I was treated by specialists, and they pronounced my case locomotor ataxia and incurable. After I had been under treatment by Prof. Starr and Dr. Ware for four months, they told me they had done all they could for me. Then I went to the New York hospital on Fifteenth street, where, upon examination, they said I was incurable, and would not take me in. At the Presbyterian hospital they examined me and told me the same thing. In March, 1890, I was taken to St. Peter's hospital, in Albany, where Prof. H. H. Hun frankly told my wife my case was hopeless; that he could do nothing for me and that she had better take me back home and save my money. But I wanted to make a trial of Prof. Hun's famous skill, and I remained under his treatment for nine weeks, but secured no benefit. All this time I had been growing worse. I had become entirely paralyzed from my waist down and partly lost control of my hands. The pain was terrible; my legs felt as though they were freezing and my stomach would not retain food, and I fell away to 120 pounds. In the Albany hospital they put 17 big burns on my back one day with red hot irons, and after a few days they put 14 more burns on and treated me with electricity, but I got worse rather than better: lost control of my bowels and water, and upon advice of the doctor, who said there was no hope for me, I was brought home, where it was thought that death would soon come to relieve me of my sufferings. Last September, while in this helpless and suffering condition, a friend of mine in Hamilton, Ont., called my attention to the statement of one John Marshall, whose case had been similar to my own, and who had been cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

"In this case, Mr. Marshall, who is a prominent member of the Royal Templars of Temperance, had after four years of constant treatment by the most eminent Canadian physicians, been pronounced incurable, and was paid the $1,000 total disability claim allowed by the order in such cases. Some months after Mr. Marshall began a course of treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking some 15 boxes was fully restored to health.

I thought I would try them, and my wife sent for two boxes of the pills and I took them according to the directions on the wrapper on each box. For the first few days the cold baths were pretty severe, as I was so very weak, but I continued to follow instructions as to taking the pills and treatment, and even before I had used up the two boxes of pills, I began to feel beneficial results from them. My pains were not so bad; I felt warmer; my head felt better; my food began to relish and agree with me; I could straighten up; the feeling began to come back into my limbs; I began to be able to get about on crutches; my eye came back as good as ever, and now, after the use of eight boxes of the pills—at a cost of only $4.00—see!—I can with the help of a cane only, walk all about the house and yard, can saw wood, and on pleasant days I walk down town. My stomach trouble is gone; I have gained 10 pounds; I feel like a new man, and when the spring opens I expect to be able to renew my organ and piano agency. I cannot speak in too high terms of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, as I know they saved my life after all the doctors had given me up as incurable."

Such is the wonderful story which the Express reporter has succeeded in securing verification of in all its details, from the hospital records where Mr. Quant was treated and from the doctors who had the case in hand and who pronounced him incurable. Let it be remembered that all this hospital treatment was two and three years ago, while his cure, by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, has been effected since last September, 1891. So it is beyond a doubt evident that his recovery is wholly due to the use of these famous pills which have been found to have made such remarkable cures in this and other cases.

Mr. Quant placed in the hands of the reporter his card of admission to Roosevelt hospital, which is here reproduced in further confirmation of his statements:



(SERIES B) 437

To verify Mr. Quant's statement our reporter a few days ago (March 31, 1892), called on Dr. Allen Starr at his office, No. 22 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city. Dr. Starr is house physician of the Roosevelt hospital, situated corner of Ninth avenue and Fifty-ninth street. In reply to inquiry he said he remembered the case of Mr. Quant very well and treated him some, but that he was chiefly treated and under the more especial care of Dr. Ware. He said he regarded this case as he did all cases of locomotor ataxia as incurable. In order that our reporter might get a copy of the history of the case of Mr. Quant from the hospital record he very courteously gave him a letter of which the following is a copy:

Dr. M. A. Starr, 22 West Forty-eighth street, office hours 9 to 12 a. m., New York, March 31, 1892.—Dear Mr. Vought: If you have any record of a locomotor ataxia by the name of Quant, who says he came to the clinic 3 or 4 years ago, No. 14,037, of the O. D. Dept., Roosevelt, sent to me from Ware, will you let the bearer know? If you have no record send him to Roosevelt Hosp. Yours,
STARR.

By means of this letter access to the records was permitted and a transcript of the history of Mr. Quant's case made from them as follows:

"No. 14,307. Admitted September 16, 1889, Charles A. Quant, aged 34 years. Born U. S. Married. Hoboken."

"History of the case:—Dyspepsia for past four or five years. About 14 months partial loss of power and numbness in lower extremities. Girdling sensation about abdomen. (November 29, 1889, not improved, external strobismus of left eye and dilatation of the left eye.) Some difficulty in passing water at times; no headache but some dizziness; alternate diarrhoea and constipation; partial ptosis past two weeks in left eye.

"Ord. R. F. Bi pep and Soda."

These are the marked symptoms of a severe case of locomotor ataxia. "And Dr. Starr said a case with such marked symptoms could not be cured, and Quant, who was receiving treatment in the outpatient department, was given up as incurable."

"There never was a case recovered in the world," said Dr. Starr. And then said: "Dr. Ware can tell you more about the case, as Quant was more under his personal treatment. I am surprised," he said, "that the man is alive, as I thought he must be dead long ago."

Our reporter found Dr. Edward Ware at his office, No. 261 West Ninety-third street, New York. He said: "I have very distinct recollections of the Quant case. It was a very pronounced case. I treated him about eight months. This was in the early summer of 1890. I deemed him incurable, and thought him dead before now. Imagine my surprise when I received a letter from him about two weeks ago telling me that he was alive, was getting well and expected soon to be fully recovered."

"What do you think, doctor, was the cause of his recovery?"

"That is more than I know. Quant says he has been taking some sort of pills and that they have cured him. At all events, I am glad the poor fellow is getting well, for his was a bad case, and he was a great sufferer."

Dr. Theodore R. Tuttle, of 319 West Eighteenth street, to whom our reporter is indebted for assisting courtesies, said of locomotor ataxia: "I have had several cases of the disease in the course of my practice. I will not say that it is incurable, but I will say that it is not deemed curable by any remedies known to the medical profession."

After this successful and confirmatory investigation in New York, our reporter Saturday, April 2, 1892, visited St. Peter's hospital, in Albany, corner of Albany and Ferry streets. He had a courteous reception by Sister Mary Philomena, the sister superior of St. Peter's hospital, and when told the object of his visit, said she remembered the case of poor Mr. Quant very distinctly. Said she: "It was a very distressing case and excited my sympathies much. Poor fellow, he couldn't be cured and had to go home in a terrible condition of helplessness and suffering." The house physician, on consulting the records of St. Peter's hospital, said he found only that Charles A. Quant entered the hospital March 14, 1890, was treated by Dr. Henry Hun, assisted by Dr. Van Derveer, who was then, 1890, at the head of the hospital, and that his case being deemed not possible to cure, he left the hospital and was taken to his home, as he supposed to die.

Such is the full history of this most remarkable case of successful recovery from a heretofore supposed incurable disease, and after all the doctors had given him up, by the simple use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Truly it is an interesting story of a most miraculous cure of a dreadful disease by the use of this popular remedy.

A further investigation revealed the fact that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is generally understood, but are a scientific preparation successfully used in general practice for many years before being offered to the public generally. They contain in a condensed form all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood, and restore shattered nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases of locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after effects of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, that tired feeling resulting from nervous prostration; all diseases depending upon vitiated humors in the blood, such as scrofula, chronic erysipelas, etc. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or sallow cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature.

On further inquiry the writer found that these pills are manufactured by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont., and are sold in boxes (never in bulk by the hundred), at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., from either address. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies or medical treatment.

TOO MUCH.

He had trundled weighty triplets when his wife was wrapped in slumber;
He had got up every morning and had built the kitchen fire;
He had pounded on her carpets and had sawed up cords of lumber
And had stretched with endless patience several miles of stiff clothes wire.

He had sworn off on his smoking just to help her on her missions,
And had matched whole coils of ribbons with no thought of the disgrace;
He had eaten several samples at her cooking exhibitions,
With a moaning in his stomach and a smile upon his face.

He had borne the shirts she made him, and his courage ne'er forsook him;
He had stood the socks she darned him, though the agony was keen;
He had worn her colored neckties, though his dearest friends all shook him,
And the clothes that she selected he displayed with humble mien.

But when one night when showed him some pajamas she had made him,
And informed him she expected that in them he would abide:
He quailed before this torture and the thoughts of it dismayed him,
And he gave one look remorseful, and he laid right down and died.

RUN BY ELECTRICITY.

London's Omnibuses Now Propelled by the Current.

Another invention which is rejoicing the hearts of London's victims of omnibus transit is the advent of electricity as the motive power of ordinary street vehicles. An electric parcel van has for some time plied about the streets of the West End. Now has come a fully equipped electric omnibus. The vehicle is somewhat larger than the familiar bus. Instead of the driver's box seat, a platform projects from the front of the bus, and below it a kind of small boy catcher of guard protects the first pair of wheels, which are for steering; the other and larger pair being for driving.

The electric bus will carry 12 people inside and 14 outside, exactly like one of the ordinary type. To each bus will be allowed three sets of accumulators, the electrical energy being stored in them. The electrical power storage company has engaged to supply the electric bus with accumulators. One set consists of 68 cells, each about 50 pounds in weight, bringing up the total weight of the new bus ready for running rather more than 3 1-2 tons, as compared with the heaviest horse bus, 3,400 weight, and the lightest 2,800. But the inventor says the electric omnibus carries its horses on board. Add to this the successful adaptation of pneumatic tires to omnibuses, just accomplished at Glasgow, and the prospects of comfortable street transit have been wonderfully improved.

A San Francisco firm is about to attempt the revival of whaling in the Antarctic ocean, which has not been carried on for as many as 25 years. A quarter of a century ago the catches of sperm and right whales used to be excellent there, and many of the whalers are now of the opinion that the southern seas will again afford a profitable field for operations.

FORT LAFAYETTE.

At the Entrance to New York Bay.

From the grim black ports no guns look out
To guard the narrow ocean gate,
And a vine hath wrapped the fort about,
Investing it with royal state.

And the frowning, solemn, stately walls
Hold here and there a patch of moss,
While the sunlit image softened falls
Below where tideways roll and toss.

It seems no more like a thing of death,
Of terrible and awful scars;
For sweet nature winds a living wreath
To hide the rusted prison bars.

At the sunset hour it seems to be
A shadow of the coming night,
Wrought of the foam and mists of the sea,
To vanish with the break of light.

It stands as a sentinel to hail
The twilight ships which gently ride
With phantom crew and shadowy sail
Regardless of the wind and tide.

When the veil of mist rolls in from sea
The fort is seen in silhouette,
And a starlit banner seems to be
Flung far out from the parapet.

And the banner is the summer sky—
From North to South and East to West,
To distant lands it seems to fly
And wrap the world below in rest.

All strife is then but a mockery—
The tossing tideways never cease,
But their gentle murmur is to me
The watchword of the nation—Peace.
—Flavel Scott Mines.

Farm and Garden

"Cole's Domestic Cofffee Berry" a Common Variety of Soja Hispida, or On Topics of Interest.

In these days of close farming, if one keeps his head above water, it is in great degree by searching out and saving the littles. There are many small matters from which a farmer may reap some profit that in the aggregate would make a respectable sum, and the time expended upon them would hardly be missed. There is a class of farmers who always have something to sell when they go to town, and such are invariably prosperous; but to have things to sell, means, first, to get them and prepare them for market. Among the hopeful signs of the times is the hopeful disposition of agriculturists, horticulturists and scientists to determine beyond question what is the best special manure for each of the crops. The importance, aye, the necessity, of this determination in the present condition of the business of the tilling of the soil is too palpable to need argument here. It appears from New Jersey and other experiment station bulletins that rather more nitrogen, less potash and much less phosphoric acid are now furnished in the average fertilizer than in 1891 or in 1890. The market price of phosphoric acid has decreased within the last two years.

There is five times as much profit in mutton as in the fleece. A sheep may be fed for one-seventh of the food that an ox requires, and will make a growth of nearly three-quarters of a pound a day for the first 280 days of its life, when it becomes excellent mutton. For 600 days it will make nearly a half pound a day. Such sheep will net six cents a pound at the farm; but such sheep, too, having a large carcass, will have a large fleece in proportion. One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the general acquiescence in the policy of giving swine range—plenty of grass, clover, etc., and less of the everlasting corn diet. For generations we have so bred and fed the hog that he has become a mass of living lard, almost entirely unfit for food. The reaction to better methods will give us pork that is fit to eat and largely increase the demand for the products of this profitable animal. Give the hog a chance, and he will do the proper thing for the owner.

Probably the garden can be made the basis of most profit in little things. A long garden, with horse cultivation, makes little work, but the soil should be well drained, deep and rich. The choice in vegetables and small fruits is almost limitless. A garden, properly conducted, will furnish something to sell every day in the year, and one need not go to town once without taking enough to pay his grocery bills. It will soon be learned what products are likely to be most in demand and which can be grown with least per cent. of cost. Good, unleached hardwood ashes for manurial purposes are an excellent fertilizer for potatoes on most soils. Sometimes, if put on in excessive quantities, like other potash manures under similar conditions, they seem to have a tendency to make the tubers scabby.

The question of large or small cows in the dairy is being narrowed down into a small compass, and there are only a few who still claim that a cow for the dairy is valuable in proportion to her weight. It would do some farm butter-makers great good to take a package of their product to an expert tester and ask his opinion of it. If anything was wrong about it, he could tell in half a minute, and he would instruct how to avoid such error in the future. Less than one-fourth of the farmers' wives make an excellent quality of butter. Winter butter has really the advantage of summer butter, as it not only possesses all the good points of the latter, but is firmer and stands up better. The premium butter is now made at any time of the year. The three secrets of fine winter butter are good, fresh cows, good food and the "know how" to make the kind of butter the market wants.

A good cow, in nine months, should at least give 5,500 pounds of good milk, 22 pounds of which should make a pound of butter. A cow is not a dairy animal that will not give at least 20 pounds of milk for 250 days, and the standard should not be put lower, especially on a tenant farm, with this proviso, that the tenant was enough of a dairyman to keep up the flow of milk of a naturally good herd. The man who cares (?) for the cow is not always an expert in dairy matters. While the practice of selling butter from the farm in rolls, balls—any way but packed is common—it is very poor practice; still, the butter buyer has need of a lesson quite as much. He is, as a rule, far from perfect in his way of handling it when bought. Butter is very susceptible to odors, and the butter room of a country store is often far from an ideal packing room. Besides this, little care is taken in the receiving, and all butter is dumped into one box together. The handling of butter should be careful, or a messy look will be given it that will detract from its value. Butter should be, if in rolls, carefully graded, and each roll wrapped in butter cloths and put in clean boxes of some sort, and closely covered at once.—J. R. Evans, in an exchange.

Discrimination in Feeding.

A regular allowance of a certain number of quarts of grain, or a given portion of hay, for each animal, is a rule generally adopted, the custom being one that insures at least a fair proportion, none being slighted; but to attempt to feed economically by allowing an equal quantity each animal is impossible. Economical feeding is not that method which keeps the animals on a minimum allowance, nor does it mean that the farmer should give his animals all that they can eat of grain and hay, but that he should feed them according to their necessities and with the view of deriving the most from them at the least cost.

Farrow cows, steers, wethers and horses that are unemployed can subsist on foods that would not be suitable for cows, ewes and mares with colts. All matured animals that are non-producers are not required to do more than supply themselves with warmth, and to repair the wastes of the body. There is no reason for giving them the same kind and quantity of food that is allowed the producers, unless they are to be fatted for market, in which case they become producers of meat, and even then they should have a special diet suitable for them only.

Young animals require food that promotes growth, and yet such foods are more generally withheld than is sometimes known, as they receive a share of grain larger than is really required. The young animal's first year is devoted mostly to growth of frame, or bone production, the foods for which purpose should consist largely of lime, and especially of phosphates that assist in uniting with the lime to form bone. Of all foods grain is more deficient in lime than any other, while clover is rich in that substance, a fact which demonstrates that, for the growing animals, clover and other hays are the best foods that can be used, and when fed in connection with bran the young stock will be fully supplied with all the essential elements for making a rapid growth as well as for providing a proper degree of warmth.

Clover hay is one of the most complete foods that can be used: It is not as concentrated as grain, but the stock can consume a larger proportion of it. It is also well supplied with the heat-producing elements. Where stock is intended to be kept over the winter only (such as steers), no grain at all is necessary, as hay, with a varied diet of roots and fodder, will bring all non-producers out in good condition in the spring, but when they are to be fatted, the grain is a necessity if the work is to be done speedily, as it does not pay to lengthen the time of fattening longer than is possible to accomplish the desired object. No farmer can afford to feed by any rule of allowance: He must know each animal, and know just what it requires in order to have it render the greatest service at the least cost. Feeding is a fine art, though it is done indiscriminately, and true economy demands good judgment in the selection of the proper foods and the quantity to use.—Philadelphia Record.

Poultry Points.

One of the agricultural papers advises exposing fresh bones and meat to the flies for a half day, and then covering them with a little earth, that the hens may find fresh meat "in the shape of myriads of worms," upon which they can feast. We are not especially fastidious, but we should not care to establish a worm-breeding heap in our henyard, and we should not relish the eggs or the chickens that were produced upon such feed. We have become accustomed to the fact that they eat insects and earth worms, but prefer to buy beef scraps for them rather than to breed maggots as food for them.

The Poultry Keeper suggests that those who desire fertile eggs for hatching in incubators should send to the southern states for them, as there the hens can run at large all winter under such conditions as enables them to produce as large a share of fertile eggs as the northern fowl would do in May. This is a good suggestion, but to make it of value, the southern poultry breeders should keep such breeds or crosses as would be suitable to grow early broilers. And when they had got them they might think it more profitable to get incubators, and raise the broilers themselves.

Many who keep their hens in the yard most of the time let them out for a while in the fall after the garden crops are harvested and in the spring before planting begins. There is one danger in so doing. If they have lacked for green food they will sometimes pack their crop with dry grass to such an extent as to become crop bound. The mode of cure consists in cutting open the swollen crop and removing this material and then sewing up the wound. A better method is that of prevention. See that they have their fill of cabbage, raw turnips or other vegetable matter before they are turned out. Then they will not eat the dry and frost-bitten grass, but will be looking for insects and clean gravel. Clover hay soaked for awhile in boiling water also helps to supply them with the vegetable food they need, and, if we can judge by its analysis, it should be an egg-producing food.

Live Stock.

The right time to sell an animal is when it is in proper condition to bring the top price in the market. If you wait for that top price to become "proper," the chances are that your animal will not go up with it.

Some people have a prejudice against Jersey beef because of the hard, yellow fat. It is good beef, though. On the islands of Jersey and Guernsey the people prefer the yellow beef just as they prefer yellow butter to pale colored fat. It is, therefore, only a matter of taste.

Small farms near the cities can usually be put to better use than growing live stock as the main business, but the fruit grower or market gardener will sometimes be surprised to see how much stock he can run in as a side issue if he really gives it his attention, and the stock will be an aid instead of a detriment, consuming much that would other wise go to waste and providing some good fertilizer that always comes handy.

There is something strange in the way some men take care of their cows and horses. The horse that does little work and brings in little winter income to his owner is kept in the stall, fed, watered and groomed, and the cows are turned into the yard to "nose" about the straw stack through the day, drink out of the brook, sleep on a plank at night, and try to digest the never changing feed of hay.

Feed a colt no solid food until three or four months old. As feed for a colt use, say, three quarts of oats and as much bran a day. Oil cake meal is too fattening for colts. Mixed hay is the best for feeding. Corn stalks are an excellent fodder, but the large amount of sugar contained produces worms in colts and horses if fed too largely. Feed cake meal about a week in small quantities, and then stop a week.

Japan Pea.

The Ohio experiment station has just received the following letter from Col. R. J. Redding, director of the Georgia experiment station:

"This station has just received from one "C. E. Cole, Buckner, Missouri," a "parched and ground" sample of what he calls "Cole's Domestic Coffee Berry," accompanied by a printed dodger setting forth the merits of this wonderful "berry" in graphic style, and supported by numerous "testimonials." He offers seed for sale at fabulous prices, $3.50 per pound, in large quantities, 25 cents per hundred seeds in small quantities.

"I presume each station will receive, or has received, a similar sample and dodger. Fortunately (perhaps) I received a few days earlier, through the Southern Cultivator, a package of the 'coffee,' together with a specimen plant in full fruit. The plant is simply a common variety of Soja Hispida, or Japan pea, so well known to many of the stations, and the seed of which is abundant and comparatively cheap.

"On the principle of the Golden Rule I write to put you on your guard against this imposition, and suggest that you 'hand it around' among your farmers, as I expect to do in this state."

At about the same time the above letter was received, the Ohio station received a copy of the same circular from Cole, together with a package of the roasted and ground "coffee" and a few of the wonderful berries. The berries are simply peas, and the "coffee" has been mixed with enough of the genuine article to give it the characteristic aroma of coffee.

From the Farm Papers.

The more like school the farm can be made, the more interest there is developed in work, study and recreation, the less thought there will be of leaving the farm.

Make the change from green to dry food slowly, so that the cows will hardly feel the transition. Sudden and radical revolutions in diet are always to be deprecated.

Do not have an army of cockerels with your flock of hens. If not fat enough to make good eating, keep by themselves till fat—then sell or kill them for home consumption.

Old hens that are too fat to lay will make elegant roasters, and will pay better disposed of as such, than to keep for the few eggs they will lay this winter; at least our experience has taught us that.

By putting bells upon the sheep much annoyance from dogs may be avoided. Have a bell to every fifth or sixth animal, and when they run there will be so much noise that the dogs will think best to retreat.

To prevent cabbage from bursting, when sufficiently hard pull the cabbage so some of the main roots will break. This will prevent further growth and cabbage will not wilt or crack open.—Practical Farmer.

A farmer who does not believe in thoroughbred stock should be consistent, and refuse to accept improved machinery, tile drainage, the silo, the separator and creamery, and all other things which have aided in making agriculture a better occupation than it was.—Farmer's Home.

Many good authorities believe that fall calves can be better raised than spring ones, the argument being that calves coming now are kept in the barn and well fed, thus getting a good start to make the best of the grazing season next year.

A man who keeps his fence repaired, his gates swinging on their hinges, his barn doors hung, his buildings painted, farm machinery out of the front yard, brush and boards and straw in proper places, is likely to find many other desirable conditions attending him.

A large crop of apples may be grown when a hive of bees is stationed in the garden. The pollen is rubbed from their bodies against the pistils of thousands of flowers, which thus become fertilized. Many of the strange feats of hybridizing varieties are due to the agency of bees.

Scrub cattle are in all probability the most expensive luxury by far that the farmers of the United States have to-day. They cost more than all the monopolists combined. Scrub stock is the leech that suck away at their prosperity 365 days in the year.—Professor Shaw.

Milk sugar constitutes five pounds out of every ten of solids in the skim-milk. Just as long as it is sugar will it promote growth, but when once it turns to acid it hinders the deposition of fat especially. When we wish to reduce to reduce the fat in our bodies we eat acids. Sour swill is a hindrance rather than help to growth.

The economists who in the early part of this century feared a growth of population which could only be checked by war, pestilence and famine, took no cognizance of agricultural chemistry. Apparently no limit can be placed to the product that may be put at the disposal of man, providing he keeps pace with the methods of science.

Apples grow best and yield the finest colored, highest flavored fruit on high, dry, clay and limestone ridges. They do well on north slopes also. Southern side hills of sandy clay or loam produce fine grapes. South slopes and exposures will yield small fruits a week earlier than north slopes, especially if the soil be sandy. By taking advantage of the altitudes, soil, slope and varieties the strawberry season may be prolonged two and sometimes nearly three weeks.

An interesting fight between a horse and a couple of blue jays occurred a short time ago at Cedar Key, Fla., in which the latter came out victorious. A horse was hitched to a tree, when the blue jays would fly down upon him and claw him. The horse stood it for some time when, suddenly it got tired of such treatment and threw himself back on the halter, breaking it and running away. After the jays had succeeded in getting the horse loose, they flew up in a tree and chatted as though they had won a great victory.
